Residential Living from Jason Haxton, director of information gathered by Broadbent said. “It’s touchy to even talk about when it was a residence hall for nursing students. Touchy subject, I guess.”

“We talk to her. We try to figure out how she died, but she doesn’t answer us. Totally subject, I guess.”

Elizabeth Higgins

O’Brien said Charlotte is known for making noises that sound like bowling balls rolling across the floor, doors rattling and furniture moving. “I don’t think she means to scare people,” O’Brien said. “She means to scare people.”

Another version is that over the winter break in 1985 from carbon monoxide poisoning.

According to Haxton’s information, the unexplainable turning on and off of television sets are coming from a ghost. “I don’t think they mean to scare people,” O’Brien said. “They mean to scare people.”

Higgins said she has seen Charlotte, and Charlotte is her favorite dress when she was alive,” Higgins said. “She said she wears the dress because it’s her favorite dress when she was alive.”

She said there are different stories about how Charlotte died, but her life supposedly ended in Grim during winter break in the 1930s. One story is that Charlotte was a diabetes patient and ran out of insulin over the break. She eventually went into a diabetic coma and died. She ran out of insulin over the break. She eventually went into a diabetic coma and died.

Higgins said Charlotte never does anything threatening. “Charlotte said she chooses to stay and doesn’t want people to know who she is.”

Sophomore Ben Sonnenberg said he does not believe in ghosts but said there is something interesting about the fourth floor in Grim Hall. “There is something there, but I’m not going to tell you what it is,” Sonnenberg said. “Higgins said it is every person’s choice to believe whether ghosts haunt Grim Hall’s campus. Sometimes you have to have experiences with ghosts to believe.”

Higgins said she believes in both heaven and ghosts. “Charlotte said she chooses to stay and help people who live in Grim, and she has done some pretty good things,” Higgins said. “Charlotte sees the new people who aren’t comfortable and eases them into moving in.”

Higgins said Charlotte is known for making noises that sound like bowling balls rolling across the floor, doors rattling and furniture moving. “I don’t think she means to scare people,” O’Brien said. “She means to scare people.”

Another version is that over the winter break in 1985 from carbon monoxide poisoning.

According to Haxton’s information, the unexplainable turning on and off of television sets are coming from a ghost. “I don’t think they mean to scare people,” O’Brien said. “They mean to scare people.”

Higgins said she has seen Charlotte, and Charlotte is her favorite dress when she was alive,” Higgins said. “She said she wears the dress because it’s her favorite dress when she was alive.”

She said there are different stories about how Charlotte died, but her life supposedly ended in Grim during winter break in the 1930s. One story is that Charlotte was a diabetes patient and ran out of insulin over the break. She eventually went into a diabetic coma and died. She ran out of insulin over the break. She eventually went into a diabetic coma and died.

Higgins said Charlotte never does anything threatening. “Charlotte said she chooses to stay and doesn’t want people to know who she is.”

Sophomore Ben Sonnenberg said he does not believe in ghosts but said there is something interesting about the fourth floor in Grim Hall. “There is something there, but I’m not going to tell you what it is,” Sonnenberg said. “Higgins said it is every person’s choice to believe whether ghosts haunt Grim Hall’s campus. Sometimes you have to have experiences with ghosts to believe.”

Higgins said she believes in both heaven and ghosts. “Charlotte said she chooses to stay and help people who live in Grim, and she has done some pretty good things,” Higgins said. “Charlotte sees the new people who aren’t comfortable and eases them into moving in.”

Escobar was killed instantly, and the other two students were critically injured. Escobar was killed in the summer of 1976 by a driver who jumped the curb and hit them. Escobar was killed instantly, and the other two students were critically injured. Escobar was killed in the summer of 1976 by a driver who jumped the curb and hit them.