Gains in battling meth are notable, but work remains

For students like me, an off-campus, the thrill of living on one’s own comes with the realization that, come college graduation, there will be no more parents to check on us, to share our struggles or successes. It can be a time of great freedom. Yet it’s also a time when we must learn how to become responsible adults. I believe that learning how to manage a bank account is a crucial life skill. While I certainly enjoyed being able to spend money on whatever I wanted, I also realized the importance of budgeting.
