the vice president for academic affairs, Ralph Cupelli, said that for the third summer in a row, the number of credit hours charged from summer courses, according to the schedule certiﬁcate, Rector said. “The idea was to add a little enticement, and since we were raising tuition fairly signiﬁcantly each year, that would be a way students could pick up some credit hour charged from summer courses, according to the schedule certiﬁcate, Rector said. “The idea was to add a little enticement, and since we were raising tuition fairly signiﬁcantly each year, that would be a way students could pick up some credit hour charged from summer courses, according to the schedule certiﬁcate, Rector said. “The idea was to add a little enticement, and since we were raising tuition fairly signiﬁcantly each year, that would be a way students could pick up some credit hour charged from summer courses, according to the schedule certiﬁcate, Rector said. “The idea was to add a little enticement, and since we were raising tuition fairly signiﬁcantly each year, that would be a way students could pick up some credit hour charged from summer courses, according to the schedule certiﬁcate, Rector said. “The idea was to add a little enticement, and since we were raising tuition fairly signiﬁcantly each year, that would be a way students could pick up some credit hour charged from summer courses, according to the schedule certiﬁcate, Rector said. “The idea was to add a little enticement, and since we were raising tuition fairly signiﬁcantly each year, that would be a way students could pick up some credit hour charged from summer courses, according to the schedule certiﬁcate, Rector said. “The idea was to add a little enticement, and since we were raising tuition fairly signiﬁcantly each year, that would be a way students could pick up some