Travis Turco lived the kind of life most people only dream of. He wasn’t just the best student at Truman State University— he was a leader and role model for everyone around him.

As a history major, member of the Student Senate, and captain of the basketball team, Travis Turco had a passion for making a positive difference in the lives of others. He was known for his creativity and enthusiasm, and everyone loved him because he always had a smile on his face.

Unfortunately, Travis Turco died last month, leaving behind a legacy that will be hard to forget. His presence on campus and the community will be greatly missed.

But let’s honor his memory by celebrating the kind of life he lived, and the impact he made on the world around him.
