Activists work to spare and care for rooms

Faculty mulls changes in MAE program requirements

Aaron Dickerson

T he Missouri University Student Government Association in 1998 was one of the last institutions in the nation to implement a program similar to Missouri's, which required all faculty to take a course in the area of diversity. It was under a large amount of pressure from students who believed the program would prevent the university from having a positive effect on student diversity. The course was a requirement for all faculty, and it was required of them to take a course in order to teach in the university.

The Missouri University Student Government Association has been a source of controversy in the past, as the program has been criticized for its lack of diversity and for the fact that it was not required of all faculty. This issue has been a concern for many years, and it has been a source of frustration for many students who believe that the program is not doing enough to promote diversity.

The Missouri University Student Government Association has recently announced that it will be implementing a new program in order to address the concerns of students and faculty. The new program will be implemented in the fall of 2011, and it will be required of all faculty in order to teach in the university. The new program will include an expanded curriculum and will be required of all faculty in order to teach in the university.

The Missouri University Student Government Association has been a source of controversy in the past, as the program has been criticized for its lack of diversity and for the fact that it was not required of all faculty. This issue has been a concern for many years, and it has been a source of frustration for many students who believe that the program is not doing enough to promote diversity.

The Missouri University Student Government Association has recently announced that it will be implementing a new program in order to address the concerns of students and faculty. The new program will be implemented in the fall of 2011, and it will be required of all faculty in order to teach in the university. The new program will include an expanded curriculum and will be required of all faculty in order to teach in the university.

The Missouri University Student Government Association has been a source of controversy in the past, as the program has been criticized for its lack of diversity and for the fact that it was not required of all faculty. This issue has been a concern for many years, and it has been a source of frustration for many students who believe that the program is not doing enough to promote diversity.

The Missouri University Student Government Association has recently announced that it will be implementing a new program in order to address the concerns of students and faculty. The new program will be implemented in the fall of 2011, and it will be required of all faculty in order to teach in the university. The new program will include an expanded curriculum and will be required of all faculty in order to teach in the university.