The VSS shelter is a safe house for battered women and children. It offers 24-hour emergency services, counseling and programs to help abused women escape abusive situations, according to Kim LeBaron, executive director. The shelter is located at 209 West 19th Street. LeBaron said that the shelter was able to help about 400 women this year.

LeBaron added that community support is crucial for the shelter to operate. The shelter is able to operate thanks to an average of $37,000 raised each year through public awareness, fundraising efforts and local stores.

LeBaron said the shelter assists women who are victims of domestic violence. Most abuse happens at home, and she said that women can be afraid to leave their homes.

She said that the shelter has helped women escape abusive situations and provided them with support and resources. LeBaron said that the shelter is able to help women by providing them with resources and support.

On Tuesday, the shelter will have its annual fall drive to raise funds. The drive will have a goal of raising $200,000 to help support the shelter.

The shelter is able to help women by providing them with resources and support.

The shelter will have its annual fall drive to raise funds on Tuesday. The drive will have a goal of raising $200,000 to help support the shelter.

The shelter is able to help women by providing them with resources and support. The drive will have a goal of raising $200,000 to help support the shelter.