Alumni face off with rugby teams

Chris Matthews

With temperatures below 50 degrees Saturday, former teammates became opponents on the pitch.

Several hundred alumni gathered on the Field of Honor as the Ball State and Butler Rugby Clubs played their annual alumni game to raise money for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

“I think it’s very cool to see everyone come back together that played together, but you can still say we belong to this club,” said Senior Bill Sexton. “It helps to all come play to raise money for our club. When we were enough people there, you don’t have to worry about being taught to原来. You can really enjoy the game together. That’s what it’s all about.”

The afternoon match started on schedule at 3 p.m. with both teams splitting the kickoff. The Bulldogs scored first on a penalty kick, followed by the Cardinals on their own penalty kick.

The teams continued to kick back and forth, with neither side gaining a foothold in the game. The Bulldogs’ small 13-player team played with passion, but the Cardinals’ 23-player team showed their superiority, winning the first half 1-0.

The second half was a continuation of the first, with both teams playing hard, but the Bulldogs were unable to score. The Cardinals scored two goals late in the game, closing the match with a 3-0 victory.

“I think it’s very cool to see everyone come back together that played together, but you can still say we belong to this club,” said Senior Bill Sexton. “It helps to all come play to raise money for our club. When we were enough people there, you don’t have to worry about being taught to originally teach. You can really enjoy the game together. That’s what it’s all about.”

The afternoon match started on schedule at 3 p.m. with both teams splitting the kickoff. The Bulldogs scored first on a penalty kick, followed by the Cardinals on their own penalty kick.

The teams continued to kick back and forth, with neither side gaining a foothold in the game. The Bulldogs’ small 13-player team played with passion, but the Cardinals’ 23-player team showed their superiority, winning the first half 1-0.

The second half was a continuation of the first, with both teams playing hard, but the Bulldogs were unable to score. The Cardinals scored two goals late in the game, closing the match with a 3-0 victory.

“I think it’s very cool to see everyone come back together that played together, but you can still say we belong to this club,” said Senior Bill Sexton. “It helps to all come play to raise money for our club. When we were enough people there, you don’t have to worry about being taught to originally teach. You can really enjoy the game together. That’s what it’s all about.”

The afternoon match started on schedule at 3 p.m. with both teams splitting the kickoff. The Bulldogs scored first on a penalty kick, followed by the Cardinals on their own penalty kick.

The teams continued to kick back and forth, with neither side gaining a foothold in the game. The Bulldogs’ small 13-player team played with passion, but the Cardinals’ 23-player team showed their superiority, winning the first half 1-0.

The second half was a continuation of the first, with both teams playing hard, but the Bulldogs were unable to score. The Cardinals scored two goals late in the game, closing the match with a 3-0 victory.

“I think it’s very cool to see everyone come back together that played together, but you can still say we belong to this club,” said Senior Bill Sexton. “It helps to all come play to raise money for our club. When we were enough people there, you don’t have to worry about being taught to originally teach. You can really enjoy the game together. That’s what it’s all about.”

The afternoon match started on schedule at 3 p.m. with both teams splitting the kickoff. The Bulldogs scored first on a penalty kick, followed by the Cardinals on their own penalty kick.

The teams continued to kick back and forth, with neither side gaining a foothold in the game. The Bulldogs’ small 13-player team played with passion, but the Cardinals’ 23-player team showed their superiority, winning the first half 1-0.

The second half was a continuation of the first, with both teams playing hard, but the Bulldogs were unable to score. The Cardinals scored two goals late in the game, closing the match with a 3-0 victory.