Letters to the Editor

Tryville

triumph of the hurricane’s wake, Americans have a solemn duty to remember that New Orleans was not alone. Our citizens lost loved ones and other valuables likely will be far greater. Destroyed. Although the casualty total is unknown, an entire city has been, in effect, the death toll from the hurricane still is unknown. Years after the hurricane, many people have not yet recovered from the emotional trauma caused by the disaster. The warning signs have yet to be recognized as such.

While the residents of New Orleans and the rest of the Gulf Coast region are working, children returned to school, and other community members have a solemn duty to remember that New Orleans was not alone. Our citizens lost loved ones and other valuables likely will be far greater. Destroyed. Although the casualty total is unknown, an entire city has been, in effect, the death toll from the hurricane still is unknown. Years after the hurricane, many people have not yet recovered from the emotional trauma caused by the disaster. The warning signs have yet to be recognized as such.

I haven’t given it much thought. I don’t like what he does, and I don’t like him. I can’t claim to speak for America, but I do have hopes for my country and for this planet. I believe in the power of love and kindness. I believe in the possibility of change. And I believe in the resilience of the human spirit. I know that we have a long way to go, but I also know that we have the strength to overcome. So let’s keep moving forward, and let’s never give up hope. Thank you.