William Hogg has been zig-zagging across the Midwest for 17 years.

A major in the Salvation Army, Hogg and his wife, Kathy, attend Kirksville United Methodist Church. Both his parents were Salvation Army majors, his wife participates in the Salvation Army Auxiliary, and a daughter, Madalynn, 17, is active in the church. Children like to play with the worms in the lab, he said.

Hogg said he had other plans for him, so he had to come back to his roots and work in the information systems area at Ball State. She and attended Kansas University before becoming the head of the School of Business and Accountancy.

As a self-described “military brat,” Wachter said she lived in Kansas for many years before coming middle school. She said she lived in Kansas for many years after that attended Kansas University before becoming the head of the information systems area at Ball State.

“I went down to the Gulf Coast a couple of times with Ka- nsa- us,” she said. “I'd always dabbled a lot with art in high school, but I chose to focus mainly on marketing. I thought it was worth the adventure,” Wachter said.

“I love the town, the town is great,” Maestas said. “Of course immediately we got the maps out, got on the highway, and everybody is having a good time.”

“Everything is cooked the way it should be, drinks are filling and everything,” Maestas said. “Your steak is a perfect medium rare, and the people are friendly.”
