Trafﬁcking awareness spurs students’ interest

BY MICHÉLLE MARTIN Staff Reporter

Feeling out what she learned in school, Kaninski didn’t want to walk the line.

Junior Chelsea Kasefang said she delved the breadth of completing projects for Her Victimizers’ Week. She said students, faculty and administrators have participating in the National Crime Victims’ Week and that while looking at topics, human trafﬁcking caught her group’s curiosity.

“We decided to do human trafﬁcking because it’s something that’s not really on the forefront of everyone’s mind,” she said.

“While doing my research, I found that we are all in the same community, generally think of victims of sexual abuse, violence.

The Trafﬁcking Victims Protection Act deﬁnes trafﬁcking as the ‘trafﬁcking of persons, the transportation, importation, exportation, sale, ﬂee-cing, harboring, service or procuring of a person for labor or services, through the use of force, fraud, or coercion, for the purpose of subjecting those persons to servitude or involuntary servitude, parole, debt bondage, or servitude.

Trafﬁcking victims include women, men, children, and may be from the United States or other countries, such as Mexico, Central America, Africa, and Eastern Europe, are sold or held into serv-

Trafﬁcking awareness spurs students’ interest

BY MICHÉLLE MARTIN Staff Reporter

Feeling out what she learned in school, Kaninski didn’t want to walk the line.

Junior Chelsea Kasefang said she delved the breadth of completing projects for Her Victimizers’ Week. She said students, faculty and administrators have participating in the National Crime Victims’ Week and that while looking at topics, human trafﬁcking caught her group’s curiosity.

“We decided to do human trafﬁ-
cking because it’s something that’s not really on the forefront of everyone’s mind,” she said.

“While doing my research, I found that we are all in the same community, generally think of victims of sexual abuse, violence.

The Trafﬁcking Victims Protection Act deﬁnes trafﬁcking as the ‘trafﬁcking of persons, the transportation, importation, exportation, sale, ﬂee-cing, harboring, service or procuring of a person for labor or services, through the use of force, fraud, or coercion, for the purpose of subjecting those persons to servitude or involuntary servitude, parole, debt bondage, or servitude.

Trafﬁcking victims include women, men, children, and may be from the United States or other countries, such as Mexico, Central America, Africa, and Eastern Europe, are sold or held into serv-

With long, ﬂowing, black hair, star-shaped, a glowing top and a dark pair of eyelashes, she stood across the stage, watching the large, cheerful crowd, lip syncing a popular dance song. The 7:15 p.m. show, the second of the semi-annual Prism dance, featuring campus groups and student organizations, drew more than 800 people from Truman, Kirkville and surrounding counties to NEMO Fairgrounds to enjoy the show and support their friends, family, straight and gay, participants at the Prism dance revel.

Senior Jennifer Cole, junior Chelsea Kasefang and junior Patricia Siemann give out information about Trafﬁcking Awareness Week and that while looking at topics, human trafﬁcking caught her group’s curiosity.

“As a matter of fact, we didn’t see any tar-killing because it’s something that’s not really on the forefront of everyone’s mind,” she said.

“The idea for this came from the idea of completing projects for Her Victimizers’ Week,” she said.

“While doing my research, I found that we are all in the same community, generally think of victims of sexual abuse, violence.

The Trafﬁcking Victims Protection Act deﬁnes trafﬁcking as the ‘trafﬁcking of persons, the transportation, importation, exportation, sale, ﬂee-cing, harboring, service or procuring of a person for labor or services, through the use of force, fraud, or coercion, for the purpose of subjecting those persons to servitude or involuntary servitude, parole, debt bondage, or servitude.

Trafﬁcking victims include women, men, children, and may be from the United States or other countries, such as Mexico, Central America, Africa, and Eastern Europe, are sold or held into serv-

With long, ﬂowing, black hair, star-shaped, a glowing top and a dark pair of eyelashes, she stood across the stage, watching the large, cheerful crowd, lip syncing a popular dance song. The 7:15 p.m. show, the second of the semi-annual Prism dance, featuring campus groups and student organizations, drew more than 800 people from Truman, Kirkville and surrounding counties to NEMO Fairgrounds to enjoy the show and support their friends, family, straight and gay, participants at the Prism dance revel.

Senior Jennifer Cole, junior Chelsea Kasefang and junior Patricia Siemann give out information about Trafﬁcking Awareness Week and that while looking at topics, human trafﬁcking caught her group’s curiosity.

“As a matter of fact, we didn’t see any tar-

With long, ﬂowing, black hair, star-shaped, a glowing top and a dark pair of eyelashes, she stood across the stage, watching the large, cheerful crowd, lip syncing a popular dance song. The 7:15 p.m. show, the second of the semi-annual Prism dance, featuring campus groups and student organizations, drew more than 800 people from Truman, Kirkville and surrounding counties to NEMO Fairgrounds to enjoy the show and support their friends, family, straight and gay, participants at the Prism dance revel.

Senior Jennifer Cole, junior Chelsea Kasefang and junior Patricia Siemann give out information about Trafﬁcking Awareness Week and that while looking at topics, human trafﬁcking caught her group’s curiosity.