Sodexo changes its name, drops "H" Sodexo USA, the company’s forerunner to Campbell Soup Company (Campbell), has stopped using Sodexo, Inc., an offshoot of the former company. The name change will be made within the next year. Starting Jan. 1, the Sodexo team will be known as "Sodexo, Inc.," the same name as the company’s forerunner. The word "Sodexo" is derived from the French term "sodė," which means "food" or "meal." The Sodexo corporation was founded in 1960 by the late Hervé Rey, who was known as "the father of the modern fast-food industry." The company was founded in France and has since expanded to more than 140 countries around the world. It is one of the world's largest food service providers, offering a variety of dining options from casual to fine dining. The company is headquartered in France and is listed on the Paris stock exchange. It employs over 100,000 people worldwide, including chefs, waiters, and cooks. The company has a long history of providing healthy, nutritious meals to its customers, and it is committed to reducing its environmental impact through sustainable practices. The company is also known for its innovative approach to food, offering a diverse range of menu options to suit different dietary needs and preferences. The change to Sodexo, Inc., is a logical move for the company, as it aligns with the company’s values of quality, innovation, and service. The company continues to be a leader in the food service industry, offering a wide range of services to customers around the world.
