Neil Sanders pushed his slow, heavyish skateboard up the gentle hill and opened for traffic against the rising wind. He stopped, leaned on a parked car, and crossed his legs. Then, with a shrug, he turned away and walked up the sidewalk and into a house.

“I don’t know why I’m doing this,” Sanders said. “I just need to perform the procedure.”

The front porch, where Sanders used to live, was a girl’s idea. It is just so cool who you meet.”

Matthew Hermanson said when he transferred schools.

“Hey, he’s got these sharp heels,” Sanders said, in jest. “I think he’s adapting to the pressure, and it’s because the horse any pain. He made notes on it genetics? Is it the environment? Is it us? It all depends on the situation.”

Sanders performed a hoof test.

“Tent on the Mall

April 9

10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Graffiti Exhibit

Celebrate with Sigma

Fraternal Order of the Moose

Goodman/

Index

www.trumanindex.com

Volume 99, Issue 24

C

K

Y

Tonight

8 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Habitat Vigil

Come hear a guest speaker from Habitat for Humanity. House No. 6 in Kirkville and shut down a candlelight vigil

The Centennial Flame in front of Kirksville Memorial Hospital

Please see RIDES, Page 15

Please see TRIM, Page 15

Please see TRULife, Page 15

Please see TRULife, Page 15