Dave Street is bustling, building construction is occurring, and some people might find the road itself a bit of a mess. People were walking, shuttle drivers were on Davis Street and parked on the road itself, and picking up trash and getting their light bulbs and bikes to reduce carbon emissions and riding their bikes to reduce carbon emissions, and students were vigorously attempting to keep the road clean.

“Of course with work going on, [contractors] may track mud or something to the street where it needs to be cleaned up,” said John Bludworth, professor of history and coordinator of the Kirksville Regional Film Festival.

Bludworth said that a construction project could be a good class project.

“Of course with work going on, [contractors] may track mud or something to the street where it needs to be cleaned up,” said John Bludworth, professor of history and coordinator of the Kirksville Regional Film Festival.
