HB 1775 will restore traffic law loopholes

HB 1775 has the potential to make it easier for some drivers to get away with speeding on campus, according to campus police. The legislation, or “strict liability” for violations on campus, was rejected in the Missouri House of Representatives before the summer recess. If HB 1775 should pass, campus police officers on campus will have no discretion in issuing tickets for traffic violations, and the officers will be bound by the law without question.

Volleyball coach’s open letter to editor

I am writing to the Index to address some issues that may affect the tone of the ever-changing volleyball season. My points are as follows:

1. It is not always easy to get the best players into the starting lineup. It is true that players must be selected on merit, but it is also true that many other factors come into play. You must balance talent, commitment, attitude, and teamwork. You must be able to read the game and make decisions based on the strengths and weaknesses of your team. You must also consider the overall needs of the team and the schedule of the season.

2. It is not always easy to maintain a healthy team atmosphere. You must be able to motivate your players to their fullest potential and to work as a cohesive unit. You must be able to maintain discipline and respect, while also fostering a spirit of camaraderie and teamwork. You must be able to handle the ups and downs of the season in a way that will keep your players motivated and focused on the task at hand.

3. It is not always easy to keep your players healthy. You must be able to work with your players to develop a conditioning program that will keep them in top form. You must be able to handle injuries and illnesses in a way that will allow your players to return to the court as soon as possible. You must also be able to work with the medical staff to ensure that your players receive the best possible care.

4. It is not always easy to keep your players focused on the game. You must be able to motivate your players to stay focused on the task at hand, even when the outcome of the game is uncertain. You must be able to handle the pressures of the game, while also keeping your players focused on the task at hand.

I am writing to the Index to address some issues that may affect the tone of the ever-changing volleyball season. My points are as follows:

1. It is not always easy to get the best players into the starting lineup. It is true that players must be selected on merit, but it is also true that many other factors come into play. You must balance talent, commitment, attitude, and teamwork. You must be able to read the game and make decisions based on the strengths and weaknesses of your team. You must also consider the overall needs of the team and the schedule of the season.

2. It is not always easy to maintain a healthy team atmosphere. You must be able to motivate your players to their fullest potential and to work as a cohesive unit. You must be able to maintain discipline and respect, while also fostering a spirit of camaraderie and teamwork. You must be able to handle the ups and downs of the season in a way that will keep your players motivated and focused on the task at hand.

3. It is not always easy to keep your players healthy. You must be able to work with your players to develop a conditioning program that will keep them in top form. You must be able to handle injuries and illnesses in a way that will allow your players to return to the court as soon as possible. You must also be able to work with the medical staff to ensure that your players receive the best possible care.

4. It is not always easy to keep your players focused on the game. You must be able to motivate your players to stay focused on the task at hand, even when the outcome of the game is uncertain. You must be able to handle the pressures of the game, while also keeping your players focused on the task at hand.

I am writing to the Index to address some issues that may affect the tone of the ever-changing volleyball season. My points are as follows:

1. It is not always easy to get the best players into the starting lineup. It is true that players must be selected on merit, but it is also true that many other factors come into play. You must balance talent, commitment, attitude, and teamwork. You must be able to read the game and make decisions based on the strengths and weaknesses of your team. You must also consider the overall needs of the team and the schedule of the season.

2. It is not always easy to maintain a healthy team atmosphere. You must be able to motivate your players to their fullest potential and to work as a cohesive unit. You must be able to maintain discipline and respect, while also fostering a spirit of camaraderie and teamwork. You must be able to handle the ups and downs of the season in a way that will keep your players motivated and focused on the task at hand.

3. It is not always easy to keep your players healthy. You must be able to work with your players to develop a conditioning program that will keep them in top form. You must be able to handle injuries and illnesses in a way that will allow your players to return to the court as soon as possible. You must also be able to work with the medical staff to ensure that your players receive the best possible care.

4. It is not always easy to keep your players focused on the game. You must be able to motivate your players to stay focused on the task at hand, even when the outcome of the game is uncertain. You must be able to handle the pressures of the game, while also keeping your players focused on the task at hand.

I am writing to the Index to address some issues that may affect the tone of the ever-changing volleyball season. My points are as follows:

1. It is not always easy to get the best players into the starting lineup. It is true that players must be selected on merit, but it is also true that many other factors come into play. You must balance talent, commitment, attitude, and teamwork. You must be able to read the game and make decisions based on the strengths and weaknesses of your team. You must also consider the overall needs of the team and the schedule of the season.

2. It is not always easy to maintain a healthy team atmosphere. You must be able to motivate your players to their fullest potential and to work as a cohesive unit. You must be able to maintain discipline and respect, while also fostering a spirit of camaraderie and teamwork. You must be able to handle the ups and downs of the season in a way that will keep your players motivated and focused on the task at hand.

3. It is not always easy to keep your players healthy. You must be able to work with your players to develop a conditioning program that will keep them in top form. You must be able to handle injuries and illnesses in a way that will allow your players to return to the court as soon as possible. You must also be able to work with the medical staff to ensure that your players receive the best possible care.

4. It is not always easy to keep your players focused on the game. You must be able to motivate your players to stay focused on the task at hand, even when the outcome of the game is uncertain. You must be able to handle the pressures of the game, while also keeping your players focused on the task at hand.

I am writing to the Index to address some issues that may affect the tone of the ever-changing volleyball season. My points are as follows:

1. It is not always easy to get the best players into the starting lineup. It is true that players must be selected on merit, but it is also true that many other factors come into play. You must balance talent, commitment, attitude, and teamwork. You must be able to read the game and make decisions based on the strengths and weaknesses of your team. You must also consider the overall needs of the team and the schedule of the season.

2. It is not always easy to maintain a healthy team atmosphere. You must be able to motivate your players to their fullest potential and to work as a cohesive unit. You must be able to maintain discipline and respect, while also fostering a spirit of camaraderie and teamwork. You must be able to handle the ups and downs of the season in a way that will keep your players motivated and focused on the task at hand.

3. It is not always easy to keep your players healthy. You must be able to work with your players to develop a conditioning program that will keep them in top form. You must be able to handle injuries and illnesses in a way that will allow your players to return to the court as soon as possible. You must also be able to work with the medical staff to ensure that your players receive the best possible care.

4. It is not always easy to keep your players focused on the game. You must be able to motivate your players to stay focused on the task at hand, even when the outcome of the game is uncertain. You must be able to handle the pressures of the game, while also keeping your players focused on the task at hand.