Stand-Up Student Senate tacks tie a school-shutdown record
Page 15

Features

Thurs., Oct. 11, 2007
www.trumanindex.com
Kirkwood, Mo. 64060

ATHLETES MIGHT PICK CLASSES EARLY
BY SHELLY HIGGROTHEM Staff Reporter

Early registration might be in the future for Truman athletes. The administration, athletics department and Student Athlete Advisory Committee (SAAC) fear the possibility of athletes being able to register for classes before other students.

“This is already happening at several other universities,” said Jeff Hall, faculty representative of the NCAA Athletics Board.

This would allow athletes the ability to get into classes they need, ahead of other students, and would also ensure the athletes would be able to avoid missing class because of intramural and other athletic events.

Gall said Truman athletes asked if the University of implementing such a policy would be feasible.

Gall said the issue was brought to the athletics committee has discussed the advantage of the program, but more evidence needs to be presented that it would be feasible.

“I want to support student athletes, but it’s important to get the facts,” Gall said.

He said the University would begin the conversations before putting early registration on the table.

The division members would need to identify all extra-curricular activities that cause students to miss classes, like intramural team events and off-campus jobs. This could be on the cards for the other students also should be considered.

“A lot is sensitive issue,” Gall said. “It is continuous discussion and potential class times should be held in the fall before the spring semester.”

Senior Charlie Tonon strides through Sunday’s race in 4:51:30.

Photo by Mark Hardy

Truman runners sweat through race
BY BOBBIE BRIDGES Staff Reporter

A few Truman students have chosen the ordeal.

This year’s 30th Annual Lefleau Bank Chicago Marathon was Sunday, Oct. 7. Thirty-five hundred runners participated in the races, completing with the campus organizers.

The ultimate goal of the Bike Co-op, Wiley said. "If something were to happen to our students on campus, we would have something to offer.

The Bike Co-op is trying to get an insurance policy by working with Hartford Insurance and Co-op it must have applied to both students and faculty, said the student. The Co-op also has an insurance policy, but it doesn’t have the liability that the Co-op would need to have for an insurance policy.

The Co-op will have to be presented that in the spring semester on Co-op interest on campus.

The Bike Co-op is to have a bike shop on campus and some other campus organizations.

"I don’t know why it didn’t work out for the student,” Fox said. "Maybe the issue just wasn’t presented fully enough.

Fowler said Truman students want a bike shop on campus and the school wants to provide this service.

Sophomore Matt Trenka said, "I think it would be a lot easier for athletes to be able to register for classes through their athletics department and Student Staff Reporter.

"This is already happening at several other universities," said Jeff Hall, faculty representative of the NCAA Athletics Board.

This would allow athletes the ability to get into classes they need, ahead of other students, and could cause hard feelings and other problems. This could be on the cards for the other students also should be considered.

“A lot is sensitive issue,” Gall said. “It is continuous discussion and potential class times should be held in the fall before the spring semester.”

Senior Ryan Gray, President of the Association of Black Students, argued about the message of Christianity on Friday on the Quad. Reams, Like many students, Smidt has felt the board interpersonal Christian principles as a full coverage of the event and more photographs, see www.trumanindex.com.

See Features, Page 13

In spring 2006, the Community Bike Sharing Program allowed students to sponsor and decorate bikes for $10 available for rent.

On Saturday night, after the bikes were pulled because of severe weather conditions, the Companies founded three new organizations to attempt to aid in registration. The program is being supported by the Associated Students of Truman.

"In 2006, the Companies founded three new organizations to attempt to aid in registration. The program is being supported by the Associated Students of Truman.

See Features, Page 13

Senate sticks with Co-op support
BY JULIA HANSEN Staff Reporter

Truman Bike Co-op is one easy close to campus.

Student Senate passed resolution Sunday in favor of a cooperation bike shop on campus.

The second resolution was an approved of required spaces already on campus for the Bike Co-op. The second resolution was not only referred to the committee for further discussion for any student organization that wishes since on campus.

Senate member senior Blayt Wiley also passed the resolution.

The next step is to continue to talk with the administration.

“Shelley, our big hurdle is to get the administration on board with this project,” Wiley said. "We need to establish a connection with the administration and the bike shop.

For the last year, students from the Bike Co-op have compiled many requirements from the administration to get the project approved. First, a business plan was to be completed, of the University’s Student Senate in Finance Committee.

A student survey was conducted last spring semester on Co-op interest on campus.

On the road again?
Truman Bike Co-op moves forward

On Sunday night, after the bikes were pulled because of severe weather conditions, the Companies founded three new organizations to attempt to aid in registration. The program is being supported by the Associated Students of Truman.

"In 2006, the Companies founded three new organizations to attempt to aid in registration. The program is being supported by the Associated Students of Truman.

See Features, Page 13

Senator Jane Niedermore argues about the message of Christianity on Friday on the Quad. Reams, Like many students, Smidt has felt the board interpersonal Christian principles as a full coverage of the event and more photographs, see www.trumanindex.com.