McClanahan has cared for patients, other of available to constituents and to representing her district and pre-not in session now, McClanahan said she always has been fascinated with that I needed to do something and to retire from that position, “I’m very grati ed to see that fundamental concern that we’re about health care issues and health care policies, so that’s fun for me, and McClanahan said she cherishes her place as a State rep talks health, money

BY LAURA PRATHER

"I think what really prompted me to run was when I found myself going in the wrong direction in the state of Missouri," she said. "I felt like we need to change things, especially in our health care arena, on a system that I have very little faith in." McClanahan said she has been a registered nurse in northeast Missouri for more than 30 years. While still other states continue to consider Medicare as their only health care coverage for their citizens, we in Missouri have already reduced the coverage. McClanahan said that even after there were a major change promoting the issue, it is an issue that needs to be taken very seriously and is not in session now, McClanahan said she always has been fascinated with that I needed to do something and to retire from that position, “I’m very grati ed to see that fundamental concern that we’re about health care issues and health care policies, so that’s fun for me, and McClanahan said she cherishes her place as a State rep talks health, money

BY LAURA PRATHER

"I think what really prompted me to run was when I found myself going in the wrong direction in the state of Missouri," she said. "I felt like we need to change things, especially in our health care arena, on a system that I have very little faith in." McClanahan said she has been a registered nurse in northeast Missouri for more than 30 years. While still other states continue to consider Medicare as their only health care coverage for their citizens, we in Missouri have already reduced the coverage. McClanahan said that even after there were a major change promoting the issue, it is an issue that needs to be taken very seriously and is not in session now, McClanahan said she always has been fascinated with that I needed to do something and to retire from that position, “I’m very grati ed to see that fundamental concern that we’re about health care issues and health care policies, so that’s fun for me, and McClanahan said she cherishes her place as a State rep talks health, money

BY LAURA PRATHER

"I think what really prompted me to run was when I found myself going in the wrong direction in the state of Missouri," she said. "I felt like we need to change things, especially in our health care arena, on a system that I have very little faith in." McClanahan said she has been a registered nurse in northeast Missouri for more than 30 years. While still other states continue to consider Medicare as their only health care coverage for their citizens, we in Missouri have already reduced the coverage. McClanahan said that even after there were a major change promoting the issue, it is an issue that needs to be taken very seriously and is not in session now, McClanahan said she always has been fascinated with that I needed to do something and to retire from that position, “I’m very grati ed to see that fundamental concern that we’re about health care issues and health care policies, so that’s fun for me, and McClanahan said she cherishes her place as a State rep talks health, money

BY LAURA PRATHER

"I think what really prompted me to run was when I found myself going in the wrong direction in the state of Missouri," she said. "I felt like we need to change things, especially in our health care arena, on a system that I have very little faith in." McClanahan said she has been a registered nurse in northeast Missouri for more than 30 years. While still other states continue to consider Medicare as their only health care coverage for their citizens, we in Missouri have already reduced the coverage. McClanahan said that even after there were a major change promoting the issue, it is an issue that needs to be taken very seriously and is not in session now, McClanahan said she always has been fascinated with that I needed to do something and to retire from that position, “I’m very grati ed to see that fundamental concern that we’re about health care issues and health care policies, so that’s fun for me, and McClanahan said she cherishes her place as a