Should the Bill of Rights not enshrine freedom of speech regardless of whether the opinion is popular or unpopular?

Freedom of speech should be relative to who is speaking. Some might consider racist or hateful言论 in public to be inflammatory and therefore not protected by the Bill of Rights.

I believe freedom of speech should be extended to all speech regardless of who is saying it. There is no room for a test of public opinion as a means for deciding whether to require free expression or not.

In my mind, the most effective way to combat speech I find offensive is for people to speak out against it. Freedom of speech is not a license to promote hate.

I do not believe in freedom of speech. Freedom of speech allows for the expression of harmful ideas. This is why freedom of speech is not protected by the Bill of Rights.
