bands to play,” Lara said.

“I'm passionate about music. There is a hot spot in Kirksville.”

Haven for music lovers opens in Kirksville

BY ANSHU THAPA

He said the whole thing started as an idea for an audio recording studio. Lara and her husband, along with their friend, Steve Bell, opened the studio in October 2006.

“We started talking more about this project and it just kind of opened up to us because of the opportunities for local bands to play,” Lara said.

He said the whole thing started as an idea for an audio recording studio. Lara and her husband, along with their friend, Steve Bell, opened the studio in October 2006.

“We started talking more about this project and it just kind of opened up to us because of the opportunities for local bands to play,” Lara said.

The studio, named Circle M, is located in the heart of Kirksville, offering recording services to local musicians.

“We want our price to be affordable,” Lara said. “We want our price to be affordable, so that everyone can come to our shows.”

The opening on Oct. 26 will include a concert where people can come to play and listen to live music.

“We also will have varieties of music—in case people want to record something that is different from what we have,” Lara said.

Lara said she and her friends will try to focus on recorded music and offering great equipment to make it as fun as if you were recording in studio.

We will also have varieties of music—in case people want to record something that is different from what we have,” Lara said.

Lara said she and her friends will try to focus on recorded music and offering great equipment to make it as fun as if you were recording in studio.

“We have some issues around the park. Before Wal-Mart, is only about two-thirds developed and is designated to be a local hub for shopping and gathering. He said the amount of competition will depend on what the new store has to offer.

“I don’t mind,” Daniels said. “I have been waiting for a long time, for a lot of years, for a store to come into the community to host those kinds of activities.”

The committee will be put together next, but, for now Bell and the LPRC are trying to figure out how to put a second exit on the park, which will help bring a ton of money into the community.

“The only way to bring them here is to figure out how to put a second exit on the park, which will help bring a ton of money into the community,” Boughton said.

“Haven for music lovers opens in Kirksville.”

“Cheaper is not always better,” Daniels said.

He said he is looking forward to a venue for local bands to play in Kirksville.

“I want to offer these prospective bands a place where people can come to play and listen to live music.

“The last thing you want to do is put an exit in the park, which is only about two-thirds developed and is designated to be a local hub for shopping,” Daniels said.

“We want to offer these prospective bands a place where people can come to play and listen to live music.

“I want to offer these prospective bands a place where people can come to play and listen to live music.

“We want to offer these prospective bands a place where people can come to play and listen to live music.”

“The last thing you want to do is put an exit in the park, which is only about two-thirds developed and is designated to be a local hub for shopping,” Daniels said.

“We want to offer these prospective bands a place where people can come to play and listen to live music.”

“The last thing you want to do is put an exit in the park, which is only about two-thirds developed and is designated to be a local hub for shopping,” Daniels said.