A day they can call their own. The Caseys are anxious and excited for the process of building and buying a new house, the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”

Nicole Casey and her son Jason, eight, are the sixth family in Kirksville to be selected by Habitat for Humanity for the new home they are going to get in Oct. 5, the Caseys will have a start a new tradition for them. “We're trying to break that cycle that they can do something different, they also want to work for their home. ... They have to be willing to partner with Habitat for Humanity. ... They have to be willing to work in the home that they are going to be owning,” she said. “She suggested that I put in an application, and I went ahead and applied,” she said. “I didn't think I would get it. It was totally not something I would have done.”