EDITORIAL board makes University wish list

In keeping with the holiday spirit, the Editorial Board has compiled a list of wishes for the University by writing its Christmas list. We think the Board of Governors and the president will find it refreshing to get a break from the usual jargon and instead think about how the University can be improved.

1.) Budget cuts. In an era when student fees are through the roof, the University should consider how to maintain its high-quality education without harsh reductions. Taxes on student life on campus include the LSP and the major, we want to see a complete pool of courses that fulfills the "general education" portion of the submission. Submissions from outside the community are welcome.

2.) More quality. The lack of quality in student life on campus is a problem that should be rectified soon. Upgrading of the LSP and the major, we want to see a complete pool of courses that fulfills the "general education" portion of the submission. Submissions from outside the community are welcome.

3.) Exterior card swipes on residence halls. While the University can't offer competitive room and board costs, it can make improvements in terms of security. A temporary delay in the entrance of many students is a great idea to start. But if the policy doesn't work in the long run, the University should consider a better, more effective way to manage and secure campus. The idea would also help students who don't have cars and need a way to get to class.

4.) More local volunteers. The University community has been good to Kirksville, but is there no way to speed things up? The University can't offer competitive room and board costs, but it can give students a chance to help out in their community. This would also help students who don't have cars and need a way to get to class.

5.) Better recruitment strategies. We think the University needs to hike up its recruiting game. The University's name in the last few years has become synonymous with "average," and this is not going to cut it. The University needs to show how it stands out in a competitive market. The University should focus on partnerships with local businesses and industries, as well as on strong recruitment strategies. The University needs to show how it stands out in a competitive market.

6.) A building named after Barbara Smithson. As Kirksville's Chamber of Commerce, we are grateful to everyone who has made this happen. However, we think the University needs to name more buildings after local figures. This will help the University be more visible in Kirksville, and also help students understand the history of the city.

7.) A permanent president. We think the University needs to find a permanent president. This is a pressing issue that cannot be ignored. The University is in need of strong leadership, and a permanent president will provide stability and continuity. The University needs to find a permanent president.

8.) A new president. We think the University needs to find a new president. This is a pressing issue that cannot be ignored. The University is in need of strong leadership, and a new president will provide stability and continuity. The University needs to find a new president.

Sincerely,
The Editorial Board
