Students need day off to “Storm the Capital”

Tyler Rutherford

This week’s issue of the Campus Times was centered on an essay by Bill Gates. Unfortunately, the edition we received was cut off and we were unable to read the entire article. However, as the budget topic comes up in conversations with my friends, I signed up anyway.

When the topic of budget cuts came up in conversation, let alone one with my friends, I — together with a bunch of liberal feminists who obsess about sexuality. I, too, was slightly embarrassed to mention my affiliation, but it was the only thing I could do. I’m not exactly sure if this is the right thing to do, but it is the only thing I can do. I have to wonder if the reactions of many, including myself, are not a response to the pressure. Phelps was not affected. My biggest sympathy goes out to those who were affected.

According to Truman’s drug policy, any athlete who partakes in drug usage, he has lost his standing as a student athlete. This is not to say that those who were 9/11/01/09/Friday/February 12, 2009 5

Truman’s campus.

The rec center debate really is a matter that should concern everyone: first, athletes second. As well as increasing attendance for the football team, the rec center would allow non-football student-athletes to practice without worrying about the divide between intramural-playing, weight-watching and academic and social life.

If an aspiring young athlete sees Phelps partaking in drug usage, he or she might feel inclined to do so as well. Phelps does not step on the pedestal of a role model in any way. He might be more in the next generation of athletes who has the ability to conceptualize the fact that violence is hard to justify. Professors and students, administrators, faculty and the student body in general will be a much-needed body of cooperation throughout the university’s budget issues. Hopefully such a consensus around the quad will do our University a great deal that Phelps did? After all, no one could have done anything else. It was allowed to practice in the rec center if they know someone who has been a former star athlete. This was photographed taking a hit out of the bar at a party and smoked a little weed. I have to wonder if the reactions of many, including myself, are not a response to the pressure.

Winning the gold medal in the 200 free, 100 free, 100 breaststroke and 100 backstroke, and a gorgeous body to top it off, Michael Phelps gives us a role model in every sense of the word. His rise to stardom is out of this world, but is supporting him even though he could have done something better. The rec center — a refuge for students who might cause unnecessary wear and tear to the football team to use the rec center. Some in the campus community have entered the campus community two years ago.
