International housing feud needlessly escalates

Jean Kaul

As a student, the Truman administration has gotten a pretty bad rap for its housing policies, but maybe it's time you change your mind — or at least be a little more open to the university’s concerns.

For the past two weeks, Student Senate has been debating whether or not to allow student residents to stay in residence halls during break periods. While I agree that the Senate needs to balance a university budget and not hand out free housing to those who don't need it, I believe that a solution needs to be found.

The Senate's resolution to allow students to stay in residence halls during break periods is a reasonable one. However, balancing a university budget can only go so far. The Senate needs to find a way to balance the needs of students and the university's financial situation.

I believe that allowing students to stay in residence halls during break periods is a good compromise. It allows the university to reduce costs while still providing a safe and secure environment for students.

I hope that the Senate finds a way to balance the university's budget and the needs of students.

Megan Vicars

The "budget crisis" has caused the housing situation at Truman to become a problem. While the university is trying to balance a budget, it is important to remember that students also need a place to live.

I believe that the university can find a way to balance its budget and still provide a safe and secure environment for students. It is important to remember that students need a place to live, and the university can work together to find a solution.

I hope that the university finds a way to balance its budget and still provide a safe and secure environment for students.

Jean Kaul is a senior political science major.

Internships need to serve cuts

Zach Vivars

As the semester draws to a close, many students are thinking about internships for the summer. While internships are a great way to gain real-world experience, they can also be a disaster.

I believe that internships should be more common in college curricula. Students need to have the opportunity to work in their field of study and gain valuable experience.

I hope that colleges and universities find a way to make internships more common in college curricula.

Zach Vivars is an intern at ABC Company.

Program offers outlet

Andrew Kindscher

As a student, I believe that the University of Missouri-Kansas City offers a great outlet for students who are looking for something to do. I believe that the university should continue to offer programs that allow students to participate in meaningful activities.

I hope that the University of Missouri-Kansas City continues to offer programs that allow students to participate in meaningful activities.

Andrew Kindscher is a senior at the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

What was going on in the classroom?

If you're looking for a classroom experience that's different from what you're used to, then the University of Missouri-Kansas City offers a great option. The university has a variety of programs that allow students to participate in meaningful activities.

I believe that the University of Missouri-Kansas City offers a great outlet for students who are looking for something to do. I hope that the university continues to offer programs that allow students to participate in meaningful activities.

Andrew Kindscher is a senior at the University of Missouri-Kansas City.