The commission on undergraduate curriculum held its next meeting almost four weeks after its last, on March 9. The commission’s agenda included several topics on curriculum models and proposed curriculum models.

Some attendees noted the difficulty in deciding which students should be considered the most recent. "It’s difficult to decide what the most recent students are," said one attendee.

Kramer said that the current LSP model would need an additional year of planning to implement. The science and physical sciences need to join single-stem mode, according to Kramer, and allowing a single course to satisfy both

Bypass receives federal aid

The plan to construct Alternate Route 63 is four years away.

The Bypass project was given its first federal aid under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

The project is expected to pay its share of the funding is $207,671,903, according to the MODOT Dec. 23, 2009, press release.

"The Economic Recovery Act gives MOODT an opportunity — it has not in the past," said Kramer. He said that the current LSP model would need a little more time to allow for the proper planning and budgeting.

"We need to plan for the project properly and to be able to do it all at once," said Kramer.

"The current LSP model has been designed to be a single-stem model," said Kramer.

"The Bypass project has received aid as part of President Obama’s stimulus package," said Kramer. "It is the only project that has received aid in the past four years."
