Things can be kept secret if there's a need to, but not forever. The Sunshine Law is generally about the use of public records and the right of the public to have access to certain information. It's a right to privacy and the Sunshine Act is designed to protect that right. The laws are not always interpreted the same way by different agencies, and there are some differences between state and federal laws.

"We've got our infrastructure and resources in the right place to be able to handle this." Bates said. "We're looking forward to the new year and we're working on this problem." The school has undergone a lot of changes over the past year and they're looking forward to the new year with optimism. Bates said the school has a lot of resources and they're working hard to make sure that the school is able to handle any situation that may arise.

"If you're going to give up something, you've got to go all the way to the end to get what you want."

"[The university] will have to figure out what it wants to do, what it can do, and then move on to the next step." Bates said. "[The university] will have to work with the students and the community to figure out what it wants to do and then move on to the next step."

"If they can't do it, they can't do it, but if they can, they can do it."
