Student Health Center deems birth control pill distribution too costly

Any good used birth control pills or at least to score in birth through the Student Health Center.

Because of high cost and inconsistency, the health center will no longer dispense birth control pills.

Senior Lisa Path said that although this decision doesn’t directly affect her, the services offered by the health center are services she values and feels are important to offer.

Brenda Higgins, director of the Student Health Center, said that the reason they stopped dispensing birth control was because it became available in the community at a lower cost. The health center will continue to offer the health care services the town's citizens want.

“Birth control is a private matter against pregnan- cy,” Higgins said. “We do want to make it as easy as possible but we also want to keep the cost down for our employees.

Obtaining birth control from local pharmacies might be more convenient for students. Higgins said the pick-up hours are different and students usually have their pills over the weekend, which is one of the most valuable times for college students. Several students said the health center should provide the services they need and not provide services they don’t want.

Higgins said that while all of the contraceptives she has on the health center can continue to dispense birth control pills and other services such as pelvic exam and sexually transmitted infection screenings. The student pharmacy, which is open Monday through Friday during the semester, is available to the public.

Higgins said the Student Health Center will continue to offer the health services they see fit but there are other clinics and resources in the community.

“We continue to offer the services that no provider for students and try to accommo-date the services that they need.” Higgins said. “We’re always inter-ested in knowing what kind of services that are needed.”

This decision doesn’t change the health center’s views about safe sex.

“I would think it would be something im-portant to offer, especially if we want to promote safe sex,” Higgins said. “It’s only one very small part of the health care that we provide. We’re always looking to promote healthy living. Action has to be taken at some point in the future, so that in a very sustainable way, we increase the pay for our employees.”
