Continued from Page 15

problems started early for the Bulldogs when they only allowed one run to Brett, from the bottom of the first, and putting runs across the plate all day long. The Bulldogs didn't return to its usual form of last year and put runs on the board. The Bulldog offense got on track and captured a narrow victory.

Stephanie Johnson was saddled with two of the weekend losses. "I feel like we were [playing] defense most of the time because Currier made us play defense a lot," Bowers said. "We didn't really have a plan most of the games. We just didn't want to throw the ball down the line to our basemen. Rebekah Shea said. "I don't necessarily think we are getting at-bats," Bowers said. "We just want to make sure we are consistently working in the zone, or at least trying to. We didn't play well at all. We made a lot of mistakes with the ball. But we still have to pitch at the knees."

Bowers said the team's consistent struggles might be due to the change incorporated in the team's 2009. "On Monday, I had the team's first practice session, so we had our first opportunity to work on the offensive side of the ball," Davis said. "We've been working with something different, and I think the team is handling it well. When we get out onto the field, we are trying to implement our system, and that's what we need to do. The team still has a lot to work on."

Problems started early for the Bulldogs when they only allowed one run to Brett, from the bottom of the first, and putting runs across the plate all day long. The Bulldogs didn't return to its usual form of last year and put runs on the board. The Bulldog offense got on track and captured a narrow victory. Stephanie Johnson was saddled with two of the weekend losses. "I feel like we were [playing] defense most of the time because Currier made us play defense a lot," Bowers said. "We didn't really have a plan most of the games. We just didn't want to throw the ball down the line to our basemen. Rebekah Shea said. "I don't necessarily think we are getting at-bats," Bowers said. "We just want to make sure we are consistently working in the zone, or at least trying to. We didn't play well at all. We made a lot of mistakes with the ball. But we still have to pitch at the knees."