Local family brings winery to Kirksville

BY JESSICA RAPP

News Editor

The Pruett family hired contractors this week to start laying the concrete for the winery they plan to open later this spring. They plan to construct the building itself on their own.

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The Pruett family plans to open their own winery, Jacob's Vineyard, just outside Kirksville late this spring. The winery will include a 30-by-40-foot wine tasting room. Pruett said they will rent the room out for events including business meetings and weddings. She said they will have enough space for bands to play.

Sheila and Russell Pruett said they already had a six-acre vineyard planted when they decided to expand it to create a business. They also had a winery that was not doing well.

The winery is in the process of being laid out this week, and contractors will begin pouring concrete in the next few days. Pruett said the Pruett family plans to open their own winery. They also rent the room out to events. She said they will have a winery and a tasting room.

Pruett said she enjoys the vineyard, which was part of their own upkeep of the property. The family does not have the resources available for the Pruett family to purchase their own winery.

“Pruett said she knows that few people get excited about planting grapes, including Cayuga, Concord, Chambourcin, Pino Noir, and Norton, but she thinks they are having a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Pruett said she went and had wines and the more you buy, the cheaper it is. Well, she went and had a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Those are the people that really enjoy the wine, and they know that buying a six, 10, or 15-year-old wine is a really good deal.”

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The winery, which is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa.

The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa.

The Pruett family hired contractors this week to start laying the concrete for the winery they plan to open later this spring. They plan to construct the building itself on their own.

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The Pruett family plans to open their own winery, Jacob's Vineyard, just outside Kirksville late this spring. The winery will include a 30-by-40-foot wine tasting room. Pruett said they will rent the room out for events including business meetings and weddings. She said they will have enough space for bands to play.

Sheila and Russell Pruett said they already had a six-acre vineyard planted when they decided to expand it to create a business. They also had a winery that was not doing well.

The winery is in the process of being laid out this week, and contractors will begin pouring concrete in the next few days. Pruett said the Pruett family plans to open their own winery. They also rent the room out to events. She said they will have a winery and a tasting room.

Pruett said she enjoys the vineyard, which was part of their own upkeep of the property. The family does not have the resources available for the Pruett family to purchase their own winery.

“Pruett said she knows that few people get excited about planting grapes, including Cayuga, Concord, Chambourcin, Pino Noir, and Norton, but she thinks they are having a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Pruett said she went and had wines and the more you buy, the cheaper it is. Well, she went and had a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Those are the people that really enjoy the wine, and they know that buying a six, 10, or 15-year-old wine is a really good deal.”

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The winery, which is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa.

The Pruett family hired contractors this week to start laying the concrete for the winery they plan to open later this spring. They plan to construct the building itself on their own.

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The Pruett family plans to open their own winery, Jacob's Vineyard, just outside Kirksville late this spring. The winery will include a 30-by-40-foot wine tasting room. Pruett said they will rent the room out for events including business meetings and weddings. She said they will have enough space for bands to play.

Sheila and Russell Pruett said they already had a six-acre vineyard planted when they decided to expand it to create a business. They also had a winery that was not doing well.

The winery is in the process of being laid out this week, and contractors will begin pouring concrete in the next few days. Pruett said the Pruett family plans to open their own winery. They also rent the room out to events. She said they will have a winery and a tasting room.

Pruett said she enjoys the vineyard, which was part of their own upkeep of the property. The family does not have the resources available for the Pruett family to purchase their own winery.

“Pruett said she knows that few people get excited about planting grapes, including Cayuga, Concord, Chambourcin, Pino Noir, and Norton, but she thinks they are having a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Pruett said she went and had wines and the more you buy, the cheaper it is. Well, she went and had a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Those are the people that really enjoy the wine, and they know that buying a six, 10, or 15-year-old wine is a really good deal.”

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The winery, which is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa.

The Pruett family hired contractors this week to start laying the concrete for the winery they plan to open later this spring. They plan to construct the building itself on their own.

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The Pruett family plans to open their own winery, Jacob's Vineyard, just outside Kirksville late this spring. The winery will include a 30-by-40-foot wine tasting room. Pruett said they will rent the room out for events including business meetings and weddings. She said they will have enough space for bands to play.

Sheila and Russell Pruett said they already had a six-acre vineyard planted when they decided to expand it to create a business. They also had a winery that was not doing well.

The winery is in the process of being laid out this week, and contractors will begin pouring concrete in the next few days. Pruett said the Pruett family plans to open their own winery. They also rent the room out to events. She said they will have a winery and a tasting room.

Pruett said she enjoys the vineyard, which was part of their own upkeep of the property. The family does not have the resources available for the Pruett family to purchase their own winery.

“Pruett said she knows that few people get excited about planting grapes, including Cayuga, Concord, Chambourcin, Pino Noir, and Norton, but she thinks they are having a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Pruett said she went and had wines and the more you buy, the cheaper it is. Well, she went and had a heck of a stock pile by the time she came up with her idea. Those are the people that really enjoy the wine, and they know that buying a six, 10, or 15-year-old wine is a really good deal.”

Sheila Pruett, Vineyard Owner

The winery, which is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa. The Pruett family is already part of Missouri Extension Center, Missouri, Missouri and Iowa.