According to MOLLIE's accounts, the athletic fee dollars should be primarily spent on improving football facilities. The current fee dollars have been spent on various projects, such as new lights at Pershing, a new sprinkler system at the soccer park, and improvements to the tennis courts.

The process of deciding how to spend the fee dollars has been a collaborative effort among the athletic staff, student athletes, and the Student Affairs Committee. While some projects, such as the new lights at Pershing, were planned in advance, others, such as the sprinkler system at the soccer park, were a result of unexpected issues during the season.

Cannon said that the athletic department is committed to using the fee dollars in a way that benefits the general student body, not just the teams that receive scholarships. He hopes to see more projects funded by the fee dollars in the future, as they are a great start for the fee program.

There are still opportunities for students to get involved in the decision-making process. The University is currently accepting applications for the Student Affairs Committee, which is responsible for overseeing the distribution of fee dollars. Applications are due by November 13th.

The possible projects for the fee dollars include improving football facilities, fixing tennis courts, and improving the soccer field. The University is also considering using the fee dollars to help fund the soccer program, which has been struggling financially.

There is still time to make suggestions for how to spend the fee dollars. Students are encouraged to contact the athletic department or the Student Affairs Committee with their ideas.

While the decision-making process can be stressful, it is important to remember that the fee dollars are being used to benefit the entire student body. The University is committed to using the fee dollars in a way that is fair and equitable, and welcomes input from all students.
