Hall senate opposes market

BY SARAH SCOTT

Ryle Hall cafeteria may change and students are mixed about the idea. While many students were happy with the new design, others said it wasn’t actually based on student feedback.

Ryle Hall Director Liz Raine and the Residence Hall Association each made a resolution stating that the cafeteria will be open to students to have their say. She said she thinks the student stakeholders are interested in discussions about the cafeteria.

While student Brian McGiline said they would want to have a say in the change of the cafeteria, he said he is not sure if that is possible since only a small group of students actually went to the Ryle Innovation Taking place their feelings about the change of the cafeteria.

“I think it’s really important for us to have a say in what happens in the building. It is our residence hall and we would like to have a change in hand,” McGiline said.

Brian Raines said the second annual innovation tour was great.

“Though I don’t know if the students really know what it is or what they want,” Raines said. He said he is concerned that the cafeteria is going to be run by Sodexo.

Ryle Hall Senate Director Liz Raine said she is unsure if Sodexo will bring a change to the cafeteria.

“We just gave ResLife the, you know, a lot of information about the change and the RHA has a resolution about the change so we’ll see how that goes,” Raine said.

Senior Chris Schraut brought up the idea on Wednesday morning. He prefers the Mainstream Market style compared to the cafeteria.

He said the students would want to have some students who have a say in the way of food, Ryle’s distance said other concerns include the price of food.

Ryle Hall, Grim Hall and the lounge isn’t designed for. She said one of the concerns was the price of food, Ryle’s distance said other concerns include the possibility that people would be allowed to carry food out of the cafeteria and into the Blue Moon Lounge, which is designed to have a certain number of seats and price of food.

Ryle’s distance said other concerns include the possibility that people would be allowed to carry food out of the cafeteria and into the Blue Moon Lounge, which is designed to have a certain number of seats and price of food.

She said the students were happy with the new design, but were concerned about the price of food.

“People want to say they want the cafeteria, but they don’t want the price of food,” she said.

She said the new design is more like the SUB, but it could be more like the Rye Sub. She said she thinks it looks better and people would like it.

Royle said the new design is more like the SUB, but it could be more like the Rye Sub. She said she thinks it looks better and people would like it.

Ryle Hall Senate Director Liz Raine said she is unsure if Sodexo will bring a change to the cafeteria.

“We just gave ResLife the, you know, a lot of information about the change and the RHA has a resolution about the change so we’ll see how that goes,” Raine said.

She said the RHA’s resolution was introduced to the Residence Hall Association, who voted yes.

“Most students were with the new design and they were happy with the design, but they still wanted to have a change,” Raine said.

Residence Hall Association President Susie Pope said that as student leaders, the students are looking out for their own best interest.

“They think it’s really important for us to have a say in what happens in the building. It is our residence hall and we would like to have a change in hand,” McGiline said.

Brian Raines said the second annual innovation tour was great.

“Though I don’t know if the students really know what it is or what they want,” Raines said. He said he is concerned that the cafeteria is going to be run by Sodexo.

“We just gave ResLife the, you know, a lot of information about the change and the RHA has a resolution about the change so we’ll see how that goes,” Raine said.

She said the RHA’s resolution was introduced to the Residence Hall Association, who voted yes.

“Most students were with the new design and they were happy with the design, but they still wanted to have a change,” Raine said.

Residence Hall Association President Susie Pope said that as student leaders, the students are looking out for their own best interest.

“There’s no specific way how it would happen. She said the RHA’s goal is to represent student interests and that it would be up to the Senate about the change to concept dining option to happen,” Pope said.

She said the students would want to have some students who have a say in the way of food, Ryle’s distance said other concerns include the price of food, Ryle’s distance said other concerns include the possibility that people would be allowed to carry food out of the cafeteria and into the Blue Moon Lounge, which is designed to have a certain number of seats and price of food.

She said the students were happy with the new design, but were concerned about the price of food.

“People want to say they want the cafeteria, but they don’t want the price of food,” she said.

She said the new design is more like the SUB, but it could be more like the Rye Sub. She said she thinks it looks better and people would like it.

Royle said the new design is more like the SUB, but it could be more like the Rye Sub. She said she thinks it looks better and people would like it.

Ryle Hall Senate Director Liz Raine said she is unsure if Sodexo will bring a change to the cafeteria.

“We just gave ResLife the, you know, a lot of information about the change and the RHA has a resolution about the change so we’ll see how that goes,” Raine said.

She said the RHA’s resolution was introduced to the Residence Hall Association, who voted yes.

“Most students were with the new design and they were happy with the design, but they still wanted to have a change,” Raine said.

Residence Hall Association President Susie Pope said that as student leaders, the students are looking out for their own best interest.

“She said the students would want to have some students who have a say in the way of food, Ryle’s distance said other concerns include the price of food, Ryle’s distance said other concerns include the possibility that people would be allowed to carry food out of the cafeteria and into the Blue Moon Lounge, which is designed to have a certain number of seats and price of food.

She said the students were happy with the new design, but were concerned about the price of food.

“People want to say they want the cafeteria, but they don’t want the price of food,” she said.

She said the new design is more like the SUB, but it could be more like the Rye Sub. She said she thinks it looks better and people would like it.

Royle said the new design is more like the SUB, but it could be more like the Rye Sub. She said she thinks it looks better and people would like it.

Ryle Hall Senate Director Liz Raine said she is unsure if Sodexo will bring a change to the cafeteria.

“We just gave ResLife the, you know, a lot of information about the change and the RHA has a resolution about the change so we’ll see how that goes,” Raine said.

She said the RHA’s resolution was introduced to the Residence Hall Association, who voted yes.

“Most students were with the new design and they were happy with the design, but they still wanted to have a change,” Raine said.

Residence Hall Association President Susie Pope said that as student leaders, the students are looking out for their own best interest.

“THe idea is that they can reserve it. They should hold up well with regular maintenance,” Wollmering said.

He said the installation of a new synthetic surface can be reserved from the SUB Web site. Students need to log onto the SUB Web site and click on the football feild. They should hold up well with regular maintenance. Students need to log onto the SUB Web site and click on the football feild.

The football field currently has access to it. They should hold up well with regular maintenance. Students need to log onto the SUB Web site and click on the football feild. They should hold up well with regular maintenance.

Students need to log onto the SUB Web site and click on the football feild. They should hold up well with regular maintenance.

Students need to log onto the SUB Web site and click on the football feild. They should hold up well with regular maintenance.