Candidates sacrificial values to increase campaign spending

Ryan Coughenour
Sen. Barack Obama's campaign spent $1.8 billion during the 2008 election cycle, according to the Campaign Finance Institute. This was followed by John McCain's campaign, which spent $1.62 billion. According to the Center for Responsive Politics, there has been an overall increase in the amount of money spent on presidential campaigns during the last three election cycles. Between 2000 and 2008, the amount of money spent on presidential campaigns increased by 71%. This increase can be attributed to several factors, including the rising costs of campaigning and the growing importance of money in American politics.

But while money has become a bigger part of the presidential campaign, it is not the only factor that influences a candidate's ability to win. As an aspiring professor, I think that teaching experience serves as an important factor in determining who will win an election. To have a successful career, one must be able to teach effectively and inspire students to learn.

Andrew Kindiger

Should Trump implement student-initiated courses?

Andrew Kindiger

Courses would benefit, learning image

Andrew Kindiger

All candidates already are spending candidates would be spending to be spent on the presidential

Andrew Kindiger

Everyone seems to love these student-initiated courses. In fact, the fact that the concept is allowed to exist is something that should be applauded. But besides the fact that they're good for the students, I think they would benefit the whole country.

Andrew Kindiger

Students lack teaching skills of professors

Andrew Kindiger

I think Obama is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. He has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think he's got the skills to be a great teacher. He's not very good at communicating with students, and he doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Trump is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. He has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think he's got the skills to be a great teacher. He's not very good at communicating with students, and he doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Clinton is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. She has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think she's got the skills to be a great teacher. She's not very good at communicating with students, and she doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Sanders is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. He has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think he's got the skills to be a great teacher. He's not very good at communicating with students, and he doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Trump is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. He has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think he's got the skills to be a great teacher. He's not very good at communicating with students, and he doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Clinton is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. She has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think she's got the skills to be a great teacher. She's not very good at communicating with students, and she doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Sanders is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. He has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think he's got the skills to be a great teacher. He's not very good at communicating with students, and he doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Trump is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. He has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think he's got the skills to be a great teacher. He's not very good at communicating with students, and he doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Clinton is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. She has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think she's got the skills to be a great teacher. She's not very good at communicating with students, and she doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.

Andrew Kindiger

I think that Sanders is a strong candidate for learning how to teach. He has the potential to be a great president, but I don't think he's got the skills to be a great teacher. He's not very good at communicating with students, and he doesn't have a lot of teaching experience.