Weekend offers variety of activities, such as scavenger hunts

BY ANNA MEIER

Get ready to shine off!

Family Day offers several activities around Kirkville and Truman's campus such as library tours, a scavenger hunt and a helicopter. Professor of Music Gregory Jones, director of campus art and display of guest performer, Paul Merkelo's band, is coming to the Truman campus on Saturday, September 19th.

The annual Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival takes place on the campus of south city and features various vendors from throughout the United States. The festival will be held in the Pershing Arena and will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 19th.

The festival is free to the public and offers a variety of activities including live music, food, and crafts. The festival also features a variety of artists and vendors, including painter, photographer, and musician. The festival is open to the public and is a great opportunity to support local artists and enjoy a fun day out.

BY MICHELLE MARTIN

When you explore the many colorful and artsy storefronts in the Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival this year, look out for these booths in particular, which display original works by the local Truman students.

These groups of student artists will display and sell the products of their hard work. Each of these booths is run by the American Institute of Graphic Arts (AIGA), the Clay People, and Bad Acids.

You may find a variety of items at these booths, from paintings and sculptures to jewelry and clothing. The clay people also offer workshops on how to make your own pottery and painting. They will be open all day long.

AIGA will be selling their own work as well as their own in an effort to make much-needed funds. They will be gathered around the Red Barn and selling their work.

The festival pays tribute to artists

The annual Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival takes place on the campus of south city and features various vendors from throughout the United States. The festival will be held in the Pershing Arena and will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 19th.

The festival is free to the public and offers a variety of activities including live music, food, and crafts. The festival also features a variety of artists and vendors, including painter, photographer, and musician. The festival is open to the public and is a great opportunity to support local artists and enjoy a fun day out.

BY MICHELLE MARTIN

When you explore the many colorful and artsy storefronts in the Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival this year, look out for these booths in particular, which display original works by the local Truman students.

These groups of student artists will display and sell the products of their hard work. Each of these booths is run by the American Institute of Graphic Arts (AIGA), the Clay People, and Bad Acids.

You may find a variety of items at these booths, from paintings and sculptures to jewelry and clothing. The clay people also offer workshops on how to make your own pottery and painting. They will be open all day long.

AIGA will be selling their own work as well as their own in an effort to make much-needed funds. They will be gathered around the Red Barn and selling their work.

The festival pays tribute to artists

The annual Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival takes place on the campus of south city and features various vendors from throughout the United States. The festival will be held in the Pershing Arena and will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 19th.

The festival is free to the public and offers a variety of activities including live music, food, and crafts. The festival also features a variety of artists and vendors, including painter, photographer, and musician. The festival is open to the public and is a great opportunity to support local artists and enjoy a fun day out.

BY MICHELLE MARTIN

When you explore the many colorful and artsy storefronts in the Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival this year, look out for these booths in particular, which display original works by the local Truman students.

These groups of student artists will display and sell the products of their hard work. Each of these booths is run by the American Institute of Graphic Arts (AIGA), the Clay People, and Bad Acids.

You may find a variety of items at these booths, from paintings and sculptures to jewelry and clothing. The clay people also offer workshops on how to make your own pottery and painting. They will be open all day long.

AIGA will be selling their own work as well as their own in an effort to make much-needed funds. They will be gathered around the Red Barn and selling their work.

The festival pays tribute to artists

The annual Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival takes place on the campus of south city and features various vendors from throughout the United States. The festival will be held in the Pershing Arena and will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 19th.

The festival is free to the public and offers a variety of activities including live music, food, and crafts. The festival also features a variety of artists and vendors, including painter, photographer, and musician. The festival is open to the public and is a great opportunity to support local artists and enjoy a fun day out.

BY MICHELLE MARTIN

When you explore the many colorful and artsy storefronts in the Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival this year, look out for these booths in particular, which display original works by the local Truman students.

These groups of student artists will display and sell the products of their hard work. Each of these booths is run by the American Institute of Graphic Arts (AIGA), the Clay People, and Bad Acids.

You may find a variety of items at these booths, from paintings and sculptures to jewelry and clothing. The clay people also offer workshops on how to make your own pottery and painting. They will be open all day long.

AIGA will be selling their own work as well as their own in an effort to make much-needed funds. They will be gathered around the Red Barn and selling their work.

The festival pays tribute to artists

The annual Red Barn Arts and Crafts Festival takes place on the campus of south city and features various vendors from throughout the United States. The festival will be held in the Pershing Arena and will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 19th.

The festival is free to the public and offers a variety of activities including live music, food, and crafts. The festival also features a variety of artists and vendors, including painter, photographer, and musician. The festival is open to the public and is a great opportunity to support local artists and enjoy a fun day out.