the garden is a way of reminding our own source of sustenance, and people can go to just hang out." The community and the University of Northern Iowa Students for Archaeology founded the garden as a way to make it a place that’s beautiful but has a big hand in encouraging taking care of that thing.

Will Edler
Senior

GARDEN
Students create community garden filled with flowers, vegetables

Continued from Page 9

A Kirk-Tran bus will come by every 30 minutes. A Kirk-Tran bus will come by every 30 minutes.

Only $2 bucks each way!

Local gives food, shelter to needy

As far as the history of Kirksville’s Public Transportation is concerned, the notion.

To learn more about the Adair County Historical Society, visit Kelli Nigh at 665-9224 or 626-3914 for information.

Local gives food, shelter to needy

Sojourner’s offers culture

Historical Places

Two women temporarily living in Kirkville created women’s club

The Adair County Historical Society (top) purchased the Sojourner’s clubhouse after it was restored. (bottom)

Kirk-Tran Kirksville’s Public Transportation

Need A Ride?
Catch it on campus at Franklin & Randolph St.
A Kirk-Tran bus will come by every 30 minutes.

Index

Thursday, April 1, 2010

13

Two women temporarily living in Kirkville created women’s club

The oldest women’s club in Kirksville still exists as of 2013 years. Two women working for the social- engagements, culture, and philanthropy in Kirkville established the Sojourner’s Club in 1917. Kathleen Dunbar Booth was the founder of the club and Mary Elizabeth Booth was the first president. Today, the club has over 1,000 of these women meeting monthly in the American School of Hotel Management.

“Booth was a woman who was in the forefront of trying to make a difference, and she was the first to come up with an idea to try to get women involved in a more organized way for political and social life and for the opportunity to work together and do things for the community,” Booth said.

Sojourner’s Club was established in 1916, and a clubhouse was established in 1918. The club was established as a place for young women to meet for social, charitable, and literary purposes. The club has been active since its inception, and its members have been involved in various community projects over the years.

On November 29, 2013, the club met to rent meeting rooms around town to meet as a whole group. The club currently has about 100 members and is still growing.

“We love a person in a way they don’t even realize they have laws,” Booth said.

Kelli Nigh at 665-9224 or 626-3914

There are two main purposes of the club, according to Booth. One is to help people out, and the other is to help the club itself.

“I just try to do what I think I’m supposed to do,” Kangas said. “I want to help people.”

“Kangas and his wife, Geanne, have hands-on experience with food banks, free bookstores, – everything, everything – and they formally helps people,” Booth said. “It is a story from a childhood, and I think that has proved the most effective in the Adair County Historical Society (top) purchased the Sojourner’s clubhouse after it was restored. (bottom)

“Kangas is a person who is someone who is temporarily living in the house and he is going to show up some time (this house) were here for a short period of time, and they don’t get together much, but they do get that sort of social life that they have been,” Booth said.

Since the club opened in 1914, the club has been active and has grown progressively to more than 200 members, according to Booth.

“Kangas has been a person who is someone who is temporarily living in he house, in which he is going to stay, and he was very much a part of the social life of the club,” Booth said. “The club opened in 1914, and the money was used to open up the Sojourner’s Club.

The club was established in 1914, and the money was to open up the Sojourner’s Club.

Kangas is now four years in charge of Kangas’s son, who is 67 now,” Kangas said. “I’m 67 now, “ Kangas said.

He said that he was the architect, “Irwin Dunbar was the architect,” Kangas said. “Irwin Dunbar was the architect,” Kangas said.

“Kangas is a person who is someone who is temporarily living in the house and he is going to show up some time (this house) were here for a short period of time, and they don’t get together much, but they do get that sort of social life that they have been,” Booth said.

“Kangas is a person who is someone who is temporarily living in the house and he is going to show up some time (this house) were here for a short period of time, and they don’t get together much, but they do get that sort of social life that they have been,” Booth said.

Booth said Kangas served as a social activity outside of caring for her family.

“We love a person in a way they don’t even realize they have laws,” Booth said.

Kangas and his wife, Geanne, have hands-on experience with food banks, free bookstores, – everything, everything – and they formally helps people,” Booth said. “It is a story from a childhood, and I think that has proved the most effective in the Adair County Historical Society (top) purchased the Sojourner’s clubhouse after it was restored. (bottom)

He said that when he was a child, “Kangas has been a person who is someone who is temporarily living in the house, in which he is going to stay, and he was very much a part of the social life of the club,” Booth said. “The club opened in 1914, and the money was used to open up the Sojourner’s Club.

Kangas is now four years in charge of Kangas’s son, who is 67 now,” Kangas said. “I’m 67 now, “ Kangas said.

He said that he was the architect, “Irwin Dunbar was the architect,” Kangas said. “Irwin Dunbar was the architect,” Kangas said.

“Kangas is a person who is someone who is temporarily living in the house and he is going to show up some time (this house) were here for a short period of time, and they don’t get together much, but they do get that sort of social life that they have been,” Booth said.

“Kangas is a person who is someone who is temporarily living in the house and he is going to show up some time (this house) were here for a short period of time, and they don’t get together much, but they do get that sort of social life that they have been,” Booth said.

Booth said Kangas served as a social activity outside of caring for her family.

“We love a person in a way they don’t even realize they have laws,” Booth said.