The football team at Truman State University has decided to adopt some new rules in order to improve the team's performance. Assistant Coach Hank Janssen announced that the team will now call recruits once per week, and every call is expected to be followed by a written report of the conversation. The reports will then be reviewed by the coaching staff, and any issues that arise will be addressed.

Janssen made it clear that these changes are part of a larger effort to improve the team's overall performance. "We want to make sure every rule is followed — even if it is a small one," Janssen said. "We need to make sure it gets done right the first time, and that includes making sure every recruit is handled properly.

The changes come after a disappointing season last year, during which the team struggled with poor execution and inconsistent play. Janssen said that the team is determined to make things right this year, and that the new rules are just the first step in that direction.

"We need to be smart about not making mistakes," said Janssen. "We're going to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed. We want to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed. We want to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed.

The team is also looking to improve its finishing ability, with Janssen stating that the team needs to be better at handling situations should they arise. "We need to be smart about not making mistakes," said Janssen. "We're going to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed. We want to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed.

The changes come after a disappointing season last year, during which the team struggled with poor execution and inconsistent play. Janssen said that the team is determined to make things right this year, and that the new rules are just the first step in that direction.

"We need to be smart about not making mistakes," said Janssen. "We're going to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed. We want to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed.

The team is also looking to improve its finishing ability, with Janssen stating that the team needs to be better at handling situations should they arise. "We need to be smart about not making mistakes," said Janssen. "We're going to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed. We want to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed.

The changes come after a disappointing season last year, during which the team struggled with poor execution and inconsistent play. Janssen said that the team is determined to make things right this year, and that the new rules are just the first step in that direction.

"We need to be smart about not making mistakes," said Janssen. "We're going to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed. We want to make sure that every recruit is handled properly, and that every rule is followed.