Dixon's contract wasted money

She received a $10,000 bonus for administrators advice on how to spend it. And the University lost the last laugh.

The Board of Governors gave a contract that supplied Dixon with a whopping $20,000 in extra compensation. But when the Fall 2008 resignation was submitted in September 2009, the University announced her resignation and the assistant to the Board of trustees Oct. 13, 2008. Dixon's contract turned into a million dollars.

In fact, she had taken the University's money and was now ready to leave the University.

In her year and a half as the Board's executive assistant, her recommendations served to devalued the University's financial standing. She should have been fired.

But Dixon's report was not published for at least six months. Dixon's report was kept secret.

Dixon's report included recommendations that were not published. Then the Board of Governors would not have approved them.

As Dixon's last laugh, the University would never have to pay the million dollars in compensation to Dixon. But Dixon's report was kept hidden.

Our copy chief and opinion editor. The Index reserves the right to edit submitted material because of space limitations, repetitive subject matter, libelous content, or simply because it is not our view.

The Index reserves the right to edit submitted material because of space limitations, repetitive subject matter, libelous content, or simply because it is not our view.

The Index reserves the right to edit submitted material because of space limitations, repetitive subject matter, libelous content, or simply because it is not our view.

To submit corrections or to contact the editor, please e-mail index@truman.edu, call us at 660-785-4449, or send a letter to Index, 1200 Barnett Hall, Truman State University, Kirksville, Mo, 63501.

To submit corrections or to contact the editor, please e-mail index@truman.edu, call us at 660-785-4449, or send a letter to Index, 1200 Barnett Hall, Truman State University, Kirksville, Mo, 63501.