On the Dance Floor

By Shannon Walter

It was the last class of the spring semester at the Truman Dance Club on Monday nights in the Student Union Ballroom. The students were hungry to learn to dance, to enjoy open dancing, to gain confidence, to meet new people and to have fun.

The session ended with a free-form dance where students could dance whatever style they wanted to. The students danced in pairs and were free to move however they pleased, whether it was a traditional dance or an unconventional style. This open dancing allowed students to express themselves and enjoy the music in their own way.

The club is open to anyone who wants to learn to dance, and they offer classes for all levels. They have beginner classes for those who want to learn the basics, and intermediate and advanced classes for those who want to develop their skills further.

The club also offers social dances on Friday nights in the Student Union Ballroom, where students can practice what they have learned in a social setting.

The club is open to anyone who wants to learn to dance, and they offer classes for all levels. They have beginner classes for those who want to learn the basics, and intermediate and advanced classes for those who want to develop their skills further.

The club also offers social dances on Friday nights in the Student Union Ballroom, where students can practice what they have learned in a social setting.