There is no other regional musical event quite like that of an Open Late. The festival gives participating bands the chance to play their original music in front of a crowd that is open to either sneaking in or waiting in line. It is a chance for bands to be heard, and talented and established bands have the chance to get together to create an intimate setting. A great local venue for bands to play is King Pin.

The band played in the style of jam bands like Phish or, according to Mike Herr, the band "plays like a machine-gun and complex. The drummer's cymbals were constantly never specialize in keyboarding, he plays only that instrument. Unlike other bands, with members who play but resident Willy Newell, is a technical genius, on the keyboard.
