Lesseig said she wishes the invite but was the only full team at the tournament. "It was a letdown I think mentally," Lesseig said. "As a team, we never know what to expect." Madsen said he was happy with how the team performed because the Bulldogs were the only team to have played all four rounds of the tournament. "The weather conditions were not great, but we had a solid performance," Madsen said. "The team improved as the tournament went on and we finished fifth in the final round." Lesseig said he hopes the team will improve over the next tournament. "We really only had a week of practice for the Bulldogs Classic," Lesseig said. "We had a lot of rounds with the weather, so we really played our best on the first day." Lesseig said he hopes the team will improve over the next tournament. "We really only had a week of practice for the Bulldogs Classic," Lesseig said. "We had a lot of rounds with the weather, so we really played our best on the first day."

The Bulldogs have just one conference tournament left in the season before the MIAA championships. The team will play in the 41st Avilla (Kan.) Invitational in October, the final tournament of the fall season. "Everybody had stretch - es of holes that they played really well," Lesseig said. "They also had stretch - es of holes that they didn't play as well." The weather played a factor in the team's performance Sunday, with wind conditions that made it tough for golfers to get comfortable. Lesseig said he hopes the weather conditions don't affect the team's performance. "I think everybody has to adapt to the conditions," Lesseig said. "The team did well Monday and Tuesday at the Illinois-Springfield Bulldog Classic last spring. Lawson has won her last two tournaments.

Junior Jen Lawson prepares to chip during the Bulldog Classic. She is the team's highest finisher since he took third at the MIAA championships. The team improved as the tournament went on and we finished fifth in the final round. Lesseig said he hoped the team will improve over the next tournament. "We really only had a week of practice for the Bulldogs Classic," Lesseig said. "We had a lot of rounds with the weather, so we really played our best on the first day."

The Bulldogs have just one conference tournament left in the season before the MIAA championships. The team will play in the 41st Avilla (Kan.) Invitational in October, the final tournament of the fall season. "Everybody had stretch - es of holes that they played really well," Lesseig said. "They also had stretch - es of holes that they didn't play as well." The weather played a factor in the team's performance Sunday, with wind conditions that made it tough for golfers to get comfortable. Lesseig said he hopes the weather conditions don't affect the team's performance. "I think everybody has to adapt to the conditions," Lesseig said. "The team did well Monday and Tuesday at the Illinois-Springfield Bulldog Classic last spring. Lawson has won her last two tournaments. Junior Jen Lawson prepares to chip during the Bulldog Classic. She is the team's highest finisher.