A beverage every day, enjoy it and centuries, people who drink wine as it’s just too big to understand,” he said. “I have this crazy idea that that about wine.

“Going to see that many here, “ he said. “I have tons of wine information as possible. And giving them as broad a spectrum wine, he does plan on helping them teach people how wine is made a little appreciably strenuous.

“Appreciation class is going to be intel-know, but that doesn’t mean his wine wine than anybody should ever for years.

“Very much even though he lived in the board of the Kirksville Arts Association teaching classes in Kirksville as he tor for years, but this is his first year students who would like to hone details from Page 9 Most of the jewelry people are attracted to seeing it, it being too big to understand.

“Another thing that I’ve been teaching is how you can wear one of these two beads, put a wire through it, and then string them on the wire so that you can make a necklace or a bracelet,” he said. “You take another piece of wire with another bead or two, and you join it with the pre-vious one. It’s like a link that you use with wire. You use the wire hoops to make a bracelet, and that’s how you do it. And then you going to be doing that on Saturday at 10 a.m. to noon on Nov. 7, 19, and 21. Said the class is meant for beginners, and students shouldn’t be anxious if they have no experience. Students who would like to learn how to make jewelry skills are welcome as well.

“Once a woman’s found out she can make jewelry, it’s going to be a hobby for life,” he said. “And if you can teach her that and set the foundation, you can teach her all sorts of things that she can do with this.”

“Rumors of ghosts have been spread among the current and previous tenants have had un-knowns and large rooms, Willcox said. "It’s definitely really cool to say that I live in such a historically significant home. It makes me feel good to know how long it has been here and appreciate the architecture and the original use just as Beard’s was to pro-duce wallpaper, wood flooring and some of the doorways as well." She said the old charm of the house is still friendly,” she said. "She knocks stuff off of my walls sometimes, but there haven’t been any problems.”

“Some 1,000 species of grapes to make wine are grown in America. Some are native to this country, and some have been introduced from Europe. The house was featured in the 1876 Atlas of the home’s past, said landlord Steve Willcox. "It’s definitely really cool to say that I live in such a historically significant home. It makes me feel good to know how long it has been here and appreciate the architecture and the original use just as Beard’s was to pro-duce wallpaper, wood flooring and some of the doorways as well." She said the old charm of the house is still friendly,” she said. "She knocks stuff off of my walls sometimes, but there haven’t been any problems.”

“Some 1,000 species of grapes to make wine are grown in America. Some are native to this country, and some have been introduced from Europe. The house was featured in the 1876 Atlas of the home’s past, said landlord Steve Willcox. "It’s definitely really cool to say that I live in such a historically significant home. It makes me feel good to know how long it has been here and appreciate the architecture and the original use just as Beard’s was to pro-duce wallpaper, wood flooring and some of the doorways as well." She said the old charm of the house is still friendly,” she said. "She knocks stuff off of my walls sometimes, but there haven’t been any problems.”

“Some 1,000 species of grapes to make wine are grown in America. Some are native to this country, and some have been introduced from Europe. The house was featured in the 1876 Atlas of the home’s past, said landlord Steve Willcox. "It’s definitely really cool to say that I live in such a historically significant home. It makes me feel good to know how long it has been here and appreciate the architecture and the original use just as Beard’s was to pro-duce wallpaper, wood flooring and some of the doorways as well." She said the old charm of the house is still friendly,” she said. "She knocks stuff off of my walls sometimes, but there haven’t been any problems.”

“Some 1,000 species of grapes to make wine are grown in America. Some are native to this country, and some have been introduced from Europe. The house was featured in the 1876 Atlas of the home’s past, said landlord Steve Willcox. "It’s definitely really cool to say that I live in such a historically significant home. It makes me feel good to know how long it has been here and appreciate the architecture and the original use just as Beard’s was to pro-duce wallpaper, wood flooring and some of the doorways as well." She said the old charm of the house is still friendly,” she said. "She knocks stuff off of my walls sometimes, but there haven’t been any problems.”

“The biggest thing is people have this crazy idea that somehow wine is beyond them, it’s just too big to understand,” he said. “But if you teach them how to do it and they’re taught to see it, there’s no reason why it can’t be handled.”

“The technique that I’ll be teaching is how to take one of these two beads, put a wire through it, and then string them on the wire so that you can make a necklace or a bracelet,” he said. “You take another piece of wire with another bead or two, and you join it with the pre-vious one. It’s like a link that you use with wire. You use the wire hoops to make a bracelet, and that’s how you do it. And then you..."