NEWS

IN BRIEF

Truman Forensic Union ends year third in nation

Two Truman State students joined the ranks of the top 8 Lincoln-Douglas debaters in the nation.

Juniors Mackenzie Barnes and Dillon Laaker advanced to the quarterfinal round of the 2015 National Forensic Association Championship. Barnes received an additional recognition, ranking ninth for the speaker award competition.

Truman sent 10 students to the Athens, Ohio, competition, which is the team's last event of the year.

Flowering agave plant celebrated with greenhouse open house

As it reaches the end of its 50-year life span, Truman State's American agave plant is anticipated to flower during early May.

The 6-foot agave plant, which resides in the campus greenhouse, began growing its now 20-foot tall flowering stalk during March. The tall stalk will help the plant, which thrives in dry conditions, spread its seeds over long distances during pollination.

Greenhouse workers intend to collect the small shoots that will sprout up around the plant and grow small pups. Pups are small agave plants which grow from the agave seeds. These pups will be sold during greenhouse sales.

In anticipation of the flowering, the greenhouse will host a series of open houses to see the rare flowering. Open houses will be 4-6 p.m. May 1, 8, 15 and 22.

Although the exact history of the large plant is not known, many faculty said they can recall the agave being fairly large when it arrived approximately 30 years ago.

STUDENT SENATE

IN BRIEF

Seven individuals were appointed or approved to serve as committee chairs.

The senate read a resolution allocating the budget for Truman Week and discussed special requests to the budget.

The senate read a resolution allocating $12,000 of the Collegiate Readership Program to "The Buzz," a campus media application by USA Today, for the 2015-2016 academic year. Amendments to the resolution and application requirements for "The Buzz" were discussed.
