Paul Shore rides the wave to Truman

Maggie Wootst

PS: I don’t know. I think people want to see?”

I: What types of things do you show me around.

I: What are your plans?

PS: Oh really?

I: Well, everyone is excited to stop there in Kirksville at Truman. That. He was, like, a really cool people go, “Wow, that was an excit- where [the audience] leaves, and want to create an environment PS: I’m excited to come there. I just

I: Picture the setting in “Son In Pauly Shore: Absolutely nothing.

I: Tell me who or what makes you

PS: Before he left Los Angeles to

I: OK, I’m imagining.

I: What do you like about doing stand-up comedy?

PS: It is almost like a sailor, like to

I: How is that going?

PS: I’m like directing a fest

I: Do you ever think you will just direct again?

PS: Yeah. I think so, especially if the movie is a hit. It comes out and makes money, and people are responding to it.

I: Tell me about other highlights.

I: What was your favorite role?

PS: I’m coming to Kirksville, Bizu.

I: That is what I like to hear. I’ve never Paul Shore will perform Friday in Baldwin Auditorium. Senior Angie Carney and sophomore Steve Simone are co-chairing the 50th anniversary of the student survey for comedians. “It will be one of our bake...