University could lose up to $4.5 million resulting in possible surcharge

Laura Umansky

At a meeting held Thursday afternoon, the University faces an additional cut of $4.5 million due to a budget shortfall in state funding. This would result in the loss of state funding for educational and research programs. The University has already implemented cost-saving measures, including a reduction in faculty and staff positions, and reduced travel budgets. The University faces the possibility of losing up to $37.5 million in state funding over the next four years, which could lead to the elimination of many programs and services.

David Rector, executive director of the Missouri Higher Education Coordinating Board, said that the University may lose up to $2.5 million in state funding if it cannot find additional sources of revenue. The University has already implemented a number of cost-cutting measures, including the elimination of 40 faculty and staff positions, and reduced travel budgets. The University faces the possibility of losing up to $37.5 million in state funding over the next four years, which could lead to the elimination of many programs and services.

Rector said that the University may lose up to $2.5 million in state funding if it cannot find additional sources of revenue. The University has already implemented a number of cost-cutting measures, including the elimination of 40 faculty and staff positions, and reduced travel budgets. The University faces the possibility of losing up to $37.5 million in state funding over the next four years, which could lead to the elimination of many programs and services.

With this cut, we’ll be at 100% of state funding as it was six years ago, Rector said. With this cut, we’ll be at 100% of state funding as it was six years ago, Rector said. The administration is trying to determine how to make the best use of the available funds, Rector said.

It’s a concern that we’re at the brink of a $4.5 million cut, which would put us at the verge of losing state funding for educational and research programs, said Rector. It’s a concern that we’re at the brink of a $4.5 million cut, which would put us at the verge of losing state funding for educational and research programs, said Rector. The administration is trying to determine how to make the best use of the available funds, Rector said.

State legislators are concerned about the University’s budget problems. Senator Jim Smith, a Democrat from Columbia, said that the University faces a difficult situation and that money should be made available to help. Smith said that the University faces a difficult situation and that money should be made available to help. He said that state funds are a critical part of the University’s budget and that they should be made available to help. Smith said that the University faces a difficult situation and that money should be made available to help. He said that state funds are a critical part of the University’s budget and that they should be made available to help.

I think the University will be able to work with the state to find a solution, Smith said. I think the University will be able to work with the state to find a solution, Smith said. It’s a concern that we’re at the verge of losing state funding for educational and research programs, said Rector. It’s a concern that we’re at the verge of losing state funding for educational and research programs, said Rector. The administration is trying to determine how to make the best use of the available funds, Rector said.

Delegate speaks its way to success in state scholarship

Jared Olinger

The Bright Flight scholarship program, sponsored by the Missouri Student Assistance Commission, was created to help low-income students attend college. The scholarship provides $1,000 for tuition and fees, and up to $2,000 for other expenses, such as books and living expenses. The scholarship was created to help low-income students attend college. The scholarship provides $1,000 for tuition and fees, and up to $2,000 for other expenses, such as books and living expenses. The scholarship was created to help low-income students attend college. The scholarship provides $1,000 for tuition and fees, and up to $2,000 for other expenses, such as books and living expenses. The scholarship was created to help low-income students attend college. The scholarship provides $1,000 for tuition and fees, and up to $2,000 for other expenses, such as books and living expenses.

Jared Olinger was one of the recipients of the Bright Flight scholarship. He said that the scholarship has afforded him the opportunity to pursue his education. Olinger was one of the recipients of the Bright Flight scholarship. He said that the scholarship has afforded him the opportunity to pursue his education. Olinger was one of the recipients of the Bright Flight scholarship. He said that the scholarship has afforded him the opportunity to pursue his education.

The scholarship has afforded me the opportunity to pursue my education, Olinger said. The scholarship has afforded me the opportunity to pursue my education. Olinger said that the scholarship has afforded him the opportunity to pursue his education. Olinger was one of the recipients of the Bright Flight scholarship. He said that the scholarship has afforded him the opportunity to pursue his education. Olinger said that the scholarship has afforded him the opportunity to pursue his education.