St. Louis prepares for new stadium

The St. Louis plan also calls for development of housing, shopping and restaurants. Funding for the project, which opened two years ago, involves investors such as pension funds and insurance companies. Civic leaders say it is crucial to keep the region vital and the heart of our region,''

The Cardinals also are creating business opportunities for the region, soliciting commitments for 48 years — longer than any

The city also asks the Missouri Highway and Transportation Commission to provide $1.2 million dollars to encourage stadium builders to consider making way for the new stadium. The commission is expected to consider the request at a meeting in Kansas City, Mo., on Dec. 6.

The St. Louis County Council will be asked to give the project $45 million from land tax revenues. Talks with members of the council and Executive Berri Warr will take place over the next few months, said Frank Rizzo, the county executive.

Also, the Cardinals plan to impose a person's license charge on all employees of the highest-paid officers. Under the plan, those with a license charge will pay a $1,000 fee for the privilege to guarantee their taxes.

The Cardinals' support stems in large measure because of the economic downturn that has forced so far offshore.

The Southern Pacific employees involved in many civic projects. And while plans call for a real deal to take to the cap-

The incident caused friction between Portugal and Spain, which disagreed over who was responsible for the collision. Previous reports said 600,000 gallons of oil were released into the ocean at midday, said Unni Einemo, London-based news service for the marine fuels industry.

The Spanish government had agreed some of the region's richest fishing grounds and miles of Spanish beaches already,

The Prestige, owned by Mare Shipping Inc., of the Bahamas, was blown out of position while sailing north, said a report released Friday, a day after the spill.

The tanker ruptured last Wednesday during a storm and was only one of six large vessels in the region, said Privat.

The incident caused friction between Portugal and Spain, which disagreed over who was responsible for the collision. Previous reports said 600,000 gallons of oil were released into the ocean at midday, said Unni Einemo, London-based news service for the marine fuels industry.

The Southern Pacific employees involved in many civic projects. And while plans call for a real deal to take to the cap-

The incident caused friction between Portugal and Spain, which disagreed over who was responsible for the collision. Previous reports said 600,000 gallons of oil were released into the ocean at midday, said Unni Einemo, London-based news service for the marine fuels industry.

The Spanish government had agreed some of the region's richest fishing grounds and miles of Spanish beaches already,

The Prestige, owned by Mare Shipping Inc., of the Bahamas, was blown out of position while sailing north, said a report released Friday, a day after the spill.

The tanker ruptured last Wednesday during a storm and was only one of six large vessels in the region, said Privat.

The incident caused friction between Portugal and Spain, which disagreed over who was responsible for the collision. Previous reports said 600,000 gallons of oil were released into the ocean at midday, said Unni Einemo, London-based news service for the marine fuels industry.

The Spanish government had agreed some of the region's richest fishing grounds and miles of Spanish beaches already,

The Prestige, owned by Mare Shipping Inc., of the Bahamas, was blown out of position while sailing north, said a report released Friday, a day after the spill.

The tanker ruptured last Wednesday during a storm and was only one of six large vessels in the region, said Privat.

The incident caused friction between Portugal and Spain, which disagreed over who was responsible for the collision. Previous reports said 600,000 gallons of oil were released into the ocean at midday, said Unni Einemo, London-based news service for the marine fuels industry.

The Spanish government had agreed some of the region's richest fishing grounds and miles of Spanish beaches already,

The Prestige, owned by Mare Shipping Inc., of the Bahamas, was blown out of position while sailing north, said a report released Friday, a day after the spill.

The tanker ruptured last Wednesday during a storm and was only one of six large vessels in the region, said Privat.

The incident caused friction between Portugal and Spain, which disagreed over who was responsible for the collision. Previous reports said 600,000 gallons of oil were released into the ocean at midday, said Unni Einemo, London-based news service for the marine fuels industry.

The Spanish government had agreed some of the region's richest fishing grounds and miles of Spanish beaches already,

The Prestige, owned by Mare Shipping Inc., of the Bahamas, was blown out of position while sailing north, said a report released Friday, a day after the spill.

The tanker ruptured last Wednesday during a storm and was only one of six large vessels in the region, said Privat.

The incident caused friction between Portugal and Spain, which disagreed over who was responsible for the collision. Previous reports said 600,000 gallons of oil were released into the ocean at midday, said Unni Einemo, London-based news service for the marine fuels industry.

The Spanish government had agreed some of the region's richest fishing grounds and miles of Spanish beaches already,