Students residing from Kirksville, Missouri, lack options when buying clothing in their local stores.

"There’s not a lot of places to buy clothes in Kirksville," said junior Jarrett Johnson, from Baldwin City, Kansas. "I'm living far away from home and I think we offer more of a selection for the students here."

In contrast, senior Steve Goetz said, "It may not be the students' fault, but that does not mean Truman students are without options in Kirksville."

Some students have noticed a similar trend.

"They're familiar stores from my hometown," said senior Leslie Mays, from Kirksville, Missouri. "I see a lot of pajama pants and sweats in Kirksville."

Freshman Leslie Mays said she applies herself a little more when she goes out at night. "I try to save my dressier clothes for the don'ts Date...where they're at socially," she said. "That's kind of the message they're trying to show you where one is from, and how they make them look."

"Clothes also can influence first impression," said junior Patricia Wojtach, kirksville, Missouri. "I basically choose what I like to wear...I think would look good on me, I'll wear it."

"If they're wearing something that I don't like, I don't like it," said sophomore Abby Peters, from Kirksville, Missouri. "I try to turn a blind eye to the 'selection' in town."

"Sometimes in a fashion magazine, you see move into the area — stores they would go to. Quincy, Ill. so I know what's there," she said. Geisendorfer is ally shops at Maurice's, Stage or The Buckle. "I'm trying to expand my retro section a little bit more," Lojewski said. "I also have a lot of '90s and today."

"A lot of them come for costumes for the different events," said senior Andy Pese, from Kirksville, Missouri. "If I'm going to really buy something I really think about it."

"I don't really shop for clothes in Kirksville," said senior Patricia Wojtach, kirksville, Missouri. "I get home often enough that I shop there."

"There’s not a lot of places to buy clothes in Kirksville," said sophomore Abby Peters, from Kirksville, Missouri. "I try to turn a blind eye to the 'selection' in town."

Students who said they do not shop here in Kirksville, many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends — many students said weekends. - Abby Peters