University students and faculty recently evaluated the effectiveness of the Student Conduct Code in light of the ever-changing technology definitions. The code, implemented in August 2000, is being put through the first stages of review. Policy calls for the code to be under review every three years.

The action heads for feedback concerning the students’ code review, which allows students and to review the code. The code is reviewed by the dean of student affairs office, which is linked to a state network. The Motion Politics Association of America will enhance the code, implement-...
