Eschewing the Council's typical procedural format, Meneely said in an interview that he had proposed a change in direction, "I think we need to listen to the citizens of this community and consider their work for the citizens of Kirksville."

Scott said his primary goals have been to work to build up their comfort in the unknown, everyone will have to develop a relationship like the last one that didn't work because people keep wanting more and more. Scott said he had served as both president and vice president while serving on the Council. While on the City Council, Meneely said he helped bring the council to a place where it is easier to work with the citizens. Meneely said he had served in both president and vice president positions, and that the council has moved in a direction that is easier to work with the citizens.
