those deployed to serve as military police in yet undisclosed locations.

Several Truman students called to active duty by the Missouri Army National Guard will serve as active-duty military police in lieu of the National Guard. The field artillery-specialized soldiers, who still are onGUARD until the month of November and three weeks each summer, will train at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., for active service as military police, according to an Oct. 28 Missouri National Guard press release.

“Right now, [military police are] the most lacking in Iraq,” said Townsend. “We have a shortage of people that look like they do this job. There is less往前+1 to the next section.

 existed for three Sundays very lastsummer. “I’m scared off, someone came out or someone was at the car and they didn’t want to give anyone a reason for getting into the car."

The triangular portion of the burglarized car window had been broken, but police reports state the car was not broken into and nothing stolen.

The police report said the man took the money because it was near the university, and then pushed her to the ground. A composite sketch of the suspect was released after the police department spoke with the victim.

The Kirksville police notified the Department of Public Safety, which assistedit in the investigation. Townsend said, “They helped us make up a couple of suspects and built in some. ” Townsend said, “They helped us make up a couple of suspects and built in some. ” The Kirksville police also notified the Missouri National Guard. Police reports state the car was not broken into and nothing stolen.

“An agreement between our agencies that says we will provide assistance when requested,” Townsend said.

He said the Kirksville police have not asked for further assistance from Public Safety, aside from distributing the composite sketches. Townsend said officers might have been called in over the weekend.

“It’s one of those things where afterward you think, ‘I should have known something was wrong,’” Phillips said. “You never think about the stuff until it’s too late.”

There have been no leads on the case.

Committee plans new rental ordinance

The days of rumors clearing up about landlords and landlords clearing up who residents might soon end with a new city ordinance.

After nearly a year of work, the Rental Housing Committee met Tuesday to consider plans for a new ordinance that could make changes for not-so-obvious reasons.

The days of renters cleaning up after landlords and landlords cleaning up after renters might soon end with a new city ordinance.

Chairwoman of the Rental Housing Committee chairwoman of the Rental Planning Committee, said most of the issues on the checklist are based on property under the city’s jurisdiction. The committee members are required to register with the city and are issued a rental certificate.

In both instances she said the new ordinance could make changes for the better. The property under the city’s jurisdiction needs to be updated to a certain point.

Metro man

John Griesedieck shows his support for the new man — the metrosexual.

Other than those three vehicles that were broken into, the thieves only stole a compact disco player in one car and a 12-pack from another.

“This is the first one we’ve had happen in Kirksville for a long time,” said Sgt. Steve Fernstrom of the Kirksville Police Department.

The victim was attacked near the 900 Block of South Broadway and near the Salvation Army, according to a police release issued by Farnsworth. He said the victim had his wallet and the police were at the scene.

No injuries were reported.

“An agreement between our agencies that says we will provide assistance when requested,” Townsend said.

He said the Kirksville police have not asked for further assistance from Public Safety, aside from distributing the composite sketches. Townsend said officers might have been called in over the weekend.

“It’s one of those things where afterward you think, ‘I should have known something was wrong,’” Phillips said. “You never think about the stuff until it’s too late.”

There have been no leads on the case.

Committee plans new rental ordinance

The days of rumors clearing up about landlords and landlords clearing up who residents might soon end with a new city ordinance.

After nearly a year of work, the Rental Housing Committee met Tuesday to consider plans for a new ordinance that could make changes for not-so-obvious reasons.

The days of renters cleaning up after landlords and landlords cleaning up after renters might soon end with a new city ordinance.

Chairwoman of the Rental Housing Committee chairwoman of the Rental Planning Committee, said most of the issues on the checklist are based on property under the city’s jurisdiction. The committee members are required to register with the city and are issued a rental certificate.

In both instances she said the new ordinance could make changes for the better. The property under the city’s jurisdiction needs to be updated to a certain point.

Metro man

John Griesedieck shows his support for the new man — the metrosexual.

Other than those three vehicles that were broken into, the thieves only stole a compact disco player in one car and a 12-pack from another.

“This is the first one we’ve had happen in Kirksville for a long time,” said Sgt. Steve Fernstrom of the Kirksville Police Department.

The victim was attacked near the 900 Block of South Broadway and near the Salvation Army, according to a police release issued by Farnsworth. He said the victim had his wallet and the police were at the scene.

No injuries were reported.

“An agreement between our agencies that says we will provide assistance when requested,” Townsend said.

He said the Kirksville police have not asked for further assistance from Public Safety, aside from distributing the composite sketches. Townsend said officers might have been called in over the weekend.

“It’s one of those things where afterward you think, ‘I should have known something was wrong,’” Phillips said. “You never think about the stuff until it’s too late.”

There have been no leads on the case.

Committee plans new rental ordinance

The days of rumors clearing up about landlords and landlords clearing up who residents might soon end with a new city ordinance.

After nearly a year of work, the Rental Housing Committee met Tuesday to consider plans for a new ordinance that could make changes for not-so-obvious reasons.

The days of renters cleaning up after landlords and landlords cleaning up after renters might soon end with a new city ordinance.

Chairwoman of the Rental Housing Committee chairwoman of the Rental Planning Committee, said most of the issues on the checklist are based on property under the city’s jurisdiction. The committee members are required to register with the city and are issued a rental certificate.

In both instances she said the new ordinance could make changes for the better. The property under the city’s jurisdiction needs to be updated to a certain point.

Metro man

John Griesedieck shows his support for the new man — the metrosexual.

Other than those three vehicles that were broken into, the thieves only stole a compact disco player in one car and a 12-pack from another.

“This is the first one we’ve had happen in Kirksville for a long time,” said Sgt. Steve Fernstrom of the Kirksville Police Department.

The victim was attacked near the 900 Block of South Broadway and near the Salvation Army, according to a police release issued by Farnsworth. He said the victim had his wallet and the police were at the scene.

No injuries were reported.

“An agreement between our agencies that says we will provide assistance when requested,” Townsend said.

He said the Kirksville police have not asked for further assistance from Public Safety, aside from distributing the composite sketches. Townsend said officers might have been called in over the weekend.

“It’s one of those things where afterward you think, ‘I should have known something was wrong,’” Phillips said. “You never think about the stuff until it’s too late.”

There have been no leads on the case.

Committee plans new rental ordinance

The days of rumors clearing up about landlords and landlords clearing up who residents might soon end with a new city ordinance.

After nearly a year of work, the Rental Housing Committee met Tuesday to consider plans for a new ordinance that could make changes for not-so-obvious reasons.

The days of renters cleaning up after landlords and landlords cleaning up after renters might soon end with a new city ordinance.

Chairwoman of the Rental Housing Committee chairwoman of the Rental Planning Committee, said most of the issues on the checklist are based on property under the city’s jurisdiction. The committee members are required to register with the city and are issued a rental certificate.

In both instances she said the new ordinance could make changes for the better. The property under the city’s jurisdiction needs to be updated to a certain point.

Metro man

John Griesedieck shows his support for the new man — the metrosexual.

Other than those three vehicles that were broken into, the thieves only stole a compact disco player in one car and a 12-pack from another.

“This is the first one we’ve had happen in Kirksville for a long time,” said Sgt. Steve Fernstrom of the Kirksville Police Department.

The victim was attacked near the 900 Block of South Broadway and near the Salvation Army, according to a police release issued by Farnsworth. He said the victim had his wallet and the police were at the scene.

No injuries were reported.

“An agreement between our agencies that says we will provide assistance when requested,” Townsend said.

He said the Kirksville police have not asked for further assistance from Public Safety, aside from distributing the composite sketches. Townsend said officers might have been called in over the weekend.

“It’s one of those things where afterward you think, ‘I should have known something was wrong,’” Phillips said. “You never think about the stuff until it’s too late.”

There have been no leads on the case.

Committee plans new rental ordinance

The days of rumors clearing up about landlords and landlords clearing up who residents might soon end with a new city ordinance.

After nearly a year of work, the Rental Housing Committee met Tuesday to consider plans for a new ordinance that could make changes for not-so-obvious reasons.

The days of renters cleaning up after landlords and landlords cleaning up after renters might soon end with a new city ordinance.

Chairwoman of the Rental Housing Committee chairwoman of the Rental Planning Committee, said most of the issues on the checklist are based on property under the city’s jurisdiction. The committee members are required to register with the city and are issued a rental certificate.

In both instances she said the new ordinance could make changes for the better. The property under the city’s jurisdiction needs to be updated to a certain point.

Metro man

John Griesedieck shows his support for the new man — the metrosexual.

Other than those three vehicles that were broken into, the thieves only stole a compact disco player in one car and a 12-pack from another.

“This is the first one we’ve had happen in Kirksville for a long time,” said Sgt. Steve Fernstrom of the Kirksville Police Department.

The victim was attacked near the 900 Block of South Broadway and near the Salvation Army, according to a police release issued by Farnsworth. He said the victim had his wallet and the police were at the scene.

No injuries were reported.

“An agreement between our agencies that says we will provide assistance when requested,” Townsend said.

He said the Kirksville police have not asked for further assistance from Public Safety, aside from distributing the composite sketches. Townsend said officers might have been called in over the weekend.

“It’s one of those things where afterward you think, ‘I should have known something was wrong,’” Phillips said. “You never think about the stuff until it’s too late.”

There have been no leads on the case.