Some students like the class as it is easy but worthwhile.

Some of the students like the professor of health and exercise science. "Plus, it's relaxing. For others, they just enjoy what it has to offer them," said Betty Lindhorst. "But for the most part, dance steps like the waltz and swing," Lindhorst said. "It is also good for your mind as well."

Lindhorst agrees the class isn't demanding. "It is an exciting opportunity at Truman," said Graduate student Dana Kuhnline, one of the interested students. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"I think a lot of people have skills that helped to bring about the language," Kuhnline said. "People like to share their language in very, very quick," Camara said.

"It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"I was really looking forward to learning a course on the West African language," Camara said. "I think a lot of people have skills that helped to bring about the language," Kuhnline said. "People like to share their language in very, very quick," Camara said.

She said languages are radically different. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"Language is like a trip to a new horizon, you would never explore," Camara said. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"I think a lot of people have skills that helped to bring about the language," Kuhnline said. "People like to share their language in very, very quick," Camara said.

She said languages are radically different. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"I think a lot of people have skills that helped to bring about the language," Kuhnline said. "People like to share their language in very, very quick," Camara said.

She said languages are radically different. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"Language is like a trip to a new horizon, you would never explore," Camara said. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"I think a lot of people have skills that helped to bring about the language," Kuhnline said. "People like to share their language in very, very quick," Camara said.

She said languages are radically different. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"Language is like a trip to a new horizon, you would never explore," Camara said. "It's an exciting opportunity at Truman," Kuhnline said. "I'm very interested because it is a non-Indo-European language."

"I think a lot of people have skills that helped to bring about the language," Kuhnline said. "People like to share their language in very, very quick," Camara said.