Worshiping while away from home

Non-Christian students work to observe their religious while at school

BY SCOTT HENSON

“Non-Christian students try to observe their religious while at school.””

While practicing Christianity at Truman, students learn to deal with the presence of more than 20 religious organizations at Truman. Some students are practicing their religious activities or participating in religious organizations other than Christianity, in the city of Kirksville. In Kirksville, a town of approximately 17,000, students turn to Truman with a cooler full of religions and their traditions. “At first I thought it was going to be really hard, but we have our own religious community and they are really helpful,” said junior Abby Flaherty, who is studying creative writing and religious studies. “I feel like I’m coming out of the closet a little bit.”

Despite the absence of a common community, Dayan has said that he enjoys the freedom that comes with observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Dayan said that while he appreciates the freedom that comes with observing different religions while away from home, he still feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Dayan said that while he appreciates the freedom that comes with observing different religions while away from home, he still feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Despite the absence of a common community, Dayan has said that he enjoys the freedom that comes with observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Dayan said that while he appreciates the freedom that comes with observing different religions while away from home, he still feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”

Even though he feels like he is not fully accepted by the majority of people, Dayan said that he still enjoys observing different religions while away from home. “I feel like I’m learning more about my own religion compared to being at home,” he said. “At home, I never really think about it.”