For Rent

University halts carillon

Students on campus heard a familiar sound last week — the bell tower is temporarily out.

A contractor from Smith’s Bell and Clock Service was replacing the electric carillon system last Wednesday and programmed it to play during Pickler Warner Towne, former dean of graduate studies at Truman, and money set aside by Ruth Warner Towne, former dean of grad- uate studies at Truman, who paid for two original installations of the bell. Check out the 2010 Index article.

Winter sounds have been silenced.

A contractor from Smith’s Bell and Clock Service was replacing the electric carillon system last Wednesday and programmed it to play during Pickler Warner Towne, former dean of graduate studies at Truman, and money set aside by Ruth Warner Towne, former dean of grad- uate studies at Truman, who paid for two original installations of the bell. Check out the 2010 Index article.

Winter sounds have been silenced.

A contractor from Smith’s Bell and Clock Service was replacing the electric carillon system last Wednesday and programmed it to play during Pickler Warner Towne, former dean of graduate studies at Truman, and money set aside by Ruth Warner Towne, former dean of grad- uate studies at Truman, who paid for two original installations of the bell. Check out the 2010 Index article.

Winter sounds have been silenced.