Sophomore April Lohrman walks back to her residence hall after class during Monday afternoon. Lohrman was able to walk with only one cane during her freshman year, but after she was struck by a car, she had to rely on a second cane to help support her while she walks.

“Sophomore April Lohrman spent a year learning to walk again after she was struck by a car while crossing South Davis Street on her way to class,” said Lindsey Borgna/Professor of English and Communications.

Since the accident, April said she has learned to be patient and to rely on others for help. She has also learned to be independent and to take care of herself.

“April’s journey to independence has been a long and difficult one. She has overcome many obstacles and has adapted to her new circumstances,” said Borgna.
